EBEN-EZER: OR. A SMALL MONUMENT OF GREAT MERC

APPEARING IN THE

Miraculous Deliverance

William Okeley, 52 John Anthony, Williams Adams, Tobn Jephs, John - Carpenter,

From the Miferable Slavery of ALGIERS. with the wonderful Means of their Escape in a Boar of Carous; the great Diffreds, and utmost Extremities which they endured at Sea for Six Days and Nights; their fafe Arrival at Majork; With fevera Matters of Remarque during their long Captivity and the following Providences of God which brough them fale to ENGLAND.

By me William Oheley.

he Second Edition, with a Further Narrative lames Deane and others.

Printed for Nath. Pinder, at the

V/F EBEN-EZER:

OR, A SMALL

MONUMENT

MERCY

APPEARING IN THE

Miraculous Deliverance

O F

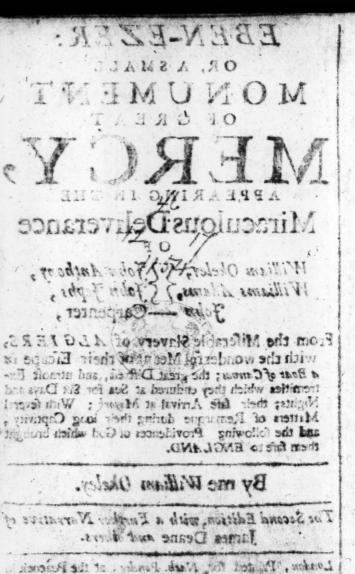

William Okeley, SJohn Anthony, Williams Adams, SJohn Jephs, John — Carpenter,

From the Miferable Slavery of ALGIERS, with the wonderful Means of their Elizape in a Boar of Canous; the great Diffred, and utmost Extremitles which they endured at Sea for Six Days and Nights; their fale Arrival at Majork; With feneral Matters of Remarque during their long Captivity, and the following Providences of Cod which brought them fale to ENGLAND,

By me William Oheley.

The Second Edition, with a Further Narrative of James Deane and others.

London, Printed for Nash. Pinder, at the Peacetting the Pouleyer, over-egainst Specks-Market a Cha.

He

Hi

Suc

Fo

W

If

W

W

A

H

W

TI

By

A

10

London Philated Bit Nach London of the Resence for the Resence 50.4.

With the lame Case frould broach a Plint, and bring

Should Bud, and Bioflum, and Ripe Almondo bear;

Upon this Book, and A bank Without a Scomme) thought a Troughed Men,

The kind lavelione, that was his Palchion fast,

Should thus a Figger, and silv to Tours His Author never was in Print before and along And (let this please or not) will never more wind If all the Preis Oppreffors of this Agos which is work Would fo Refolve, twould Happiness prefage : al an sto M He should as foon another Voyage take. As be Obig'd another Book to make, in allo I adt O toy His Canvas Bode Escaped Seas and Wind, U. I Jonnes of W. He fears this Paper-Veffel will not find his don't Such gentle Gales, when every Reader hath and and and Pow'r with a puff to fink the Writers Paith. I no ner! W For who fo Prints a Book, goes off from Shore. To hazard that which was his own before As one poor Pinnace Over-match'd, that fights and and I With an Armado, fo doth he who Writes: If Books (like goodly Merchant-Ships) fet forth lost roll Laden with Riches of the greatest worth; od had bor A With Councels, Pathers, Text-men, School-Men Mann'll, With Sacred Canon Mounted at each Hand : Show MO Are hard befer, and forc'd to make Defence shall do !! Against Arin'd Atheisn, Pride and Impudence and and How can this little Cock-Boat hope and Escape. When Scripture Suffers Piracy and Rape? O all 5736 Noe's Ark (wherein the World Epitomizid, and tona And Manking in Octavo was Comprized. I cai sign ! Though in the Delage twas preferred found delag of By Infidelity it felf lyes drown'd. That Mofes with a Rod the Sea should Cane, div both And Beat the Coward streams into a Plain; of the disweated to ande the fron-Texts of the Press

With the same Cane should broach a Flint, and bring Out of its Fiery Womb a flowing Spring:
That a dry stick assign'd for Levie's stare,
Should Bud, and Blossom, and Ripe Almonda bear;
That Sampion with the Jaw-Bone of an Ass
(And Atheists think Him one that letvit pass)
Without a Scomme) should slay a Thousand Men,
And being weary with the Slaughter; then
The kind Jaw-Bone, that was his Faulchion such,
Should turn a Flaggon, and allay his Thirst.
These Miracles, and all the Secred store.
Which Faith should grasp, and Piety adore,
Met with Arrests, Arraignments, and a Doesn Moreharsh than Tales of Heathen Greece or Rome.

Who cannot Truth believe, but Fathers can.
When Truth that cannot Lye, shall be bely d.
Its Pow'r defy'd, and Weakness Deify'd:
When our Diseased Appetite shall Lust
For Egyts Leek, or Gibsons Mouldy Crust;
Ephraim will seed on Ashes, and distain
The Manna Counsits, and the Candy'd Rain.
An Heaven-born Truth (like poor Mens Infants) may
For lack of God-Fathers, unchrist'ned stay,
And find no Priest; when every stander by
Will be a Gossip to a Great Mans Lye.
O Miracle of Love! God-Man was fain
Each Miracle he wrought, to make it twain.
The Fact, and Faith too, else the Fact in vain.

There is a Generation alive,
That Live on Lying Miracles and thrive,
There is a Guild of Priefts will undertake
To make that God who doth all Wonders make:
Can make Him, Bake Him, Break Him, Kat him too,
And with a Thought can All again under
Had but force Monk this History to Drefs,
He would have made the Iron-Teeth of th' Prefi

Fora

Turn Edge, and grin, to they the Ruff and Rile ; Compar'd with which, all's Pap in Mandevile. Had these Five Comrades been good Sons of Rome, Nothing but Miragles had brought them home, Okely hae been inspired; Jephs had Seen An Apron dropt down from Heavens Virgin-Queen To make a Sail : Carpenter should have, pray'd Saint Poleph to affift him at his Trade: And the next Morn did in the Cellar find The Keel, Ribbs, Pins; all Model'd to his Mind. An Holy Sea-Calf in St. Peters Coat, Had then appear'd, and danc'd before the Boat: Saint Christopher with a Sweet Babe on's Back, Had stalkt along to fave from Rock and Wrack: Saint Nicholas (or in his Shape, Old Nick) Had with a straw steer'd the Boat Catholick . The Tortoile taken napping in the Flood, Had first said Grace, and then become their Food: Yea, and his Sacred Shell had been preferr'd To make fine Combs for Wilgeforts Beard. And who can tell (for now 'tis Thirty Years Since this ftrange Expedition from Algiers) What Use the Fryars of Mayork have made Of the poor Skiff to raife their Legend Trade?

But, be it as it will; Buy, or not Buy; This Book is Protestant, and hates a Lye. The Reader shall find in this Breviary All Pater Nosters, not one Are Mary. If Gentleman and Christian may avail. If Honour and Religion can be bail For this poor Pilgrims Truth and Faithfulness, It may with Leave and safety past the Preis. Let him who scorns to Read, on Reads to Scorn, And thinks this Story might have been forborn; First, buy the Book, then give Security To do the like; The Book-Seller and I Will give him Bond, when he Returns to Lane, To pay a Thousand pounds into his Hand.

Mean while this Nardive (all plain and Tene) and Tries Is worth its Shilling to a Turk or Jews on drive by across But to a Children (were the Story gone) and and I The Preface is a Penny worth alone.

The whole hath no Bresta's or Miltakes and and Save what the Printer and the Poet makes nord A na

To make a Sail Car cover frould have dray'd

Med then appear to not tome't before the Boxte Seint Court process of a Secret Base of a Parket Med Italia along to have no u Rock and Wrack; Sunt Neoner (or it his Snape, Old With).

Hed with a know there'd the Boar Catholics.

Saint Foliph to aiffit the at his I tade; And the next More did in the Cellar had The Keel, R the Part; all Modell to his Mind

An Holy Sea Cot in se Pers Co

To bis Ingenions Friend, Mr. William Okely, upon his Miraculous Deliverance in his Canvas Boat.

THY Boat, thy Coffin call; and Greet.
The Canvas as thy Winding Sheet.
From Coffin, Shrowd Delivered,
Call't Resurrection from the Dead.
And since thy Lafe's the Great, thy Lines present,
As God's Great Mercies Lesser Monument.

As God's Great Mercies Lesser Monument.

I had taken look and and the look and the look

A

PREFACE

To the following

NARRATIVE.

Courteous Reader,

I DO readily agree with thee, that there is no fort of Writings more lyable to abuse than this of the Narrative: Lying much at the Mercy of the Composer to be Corrupted; and as much in danger tobe mis-improved by the Reader: The Reader therefore I amsure will demand good Security that he is not imposed upon in the ensuing Relation, and the Writer craves leave too, to maintain a modest Jealousie, lest the Reader should miss the benefit that is designed to him in it: The Author will engage, and pawn his Credit not to wrong the Narrative, and he would take some care also that the Reader may not wrong himself.

It is very true, that every Narrator is under a strong Temptation to Season his Difcourse to the Gusto of the Time, not impo-

A

fin

fing a fevere Law upon himself, to Report what is true, but accomodating his Story to the Liquorish Appetite of others: I have obferved that fome Men are ashamed to Recount mean and humble Matters; if they bring us any thing below Prodigy and Miracle; if they stuff not their Farces with Gorgons, Harries, Centaures, and Enchanted Islands, they neither please themselves, nor hope to take their Readers by the Heart Brings. Hence it is, that we have so many lean, barren Stories, larded with the Additaments of Fruitful Invention, as if they had been Penn'd by the Pattern of Xenophon's Cyrus. Non ad Historia fidem, sed ad justi Imperii Exemplar: Not for Counter-panes of Truth, but Counterfeits of Fancy: They tell us not what was really done, but what they would have bad done, if they might have had the Contrivance of the Scene and Tragedy: They first form Idea's of Ingenious Romances in their own Heads, and then obtrude them upon the World for Historical Verieties.

Just as our Hydrographers in the Delineating of Countries, with one wanton Extravagant Frolick of their Graver can raise Mountains, where Nature left us Vallies; and sink deep Vallies, where God has stretch'd out a Champagn; can create Bays, and Creeks, where the Creator made firm Land; and just out Promontories, and Capes, where there's nothing nothing in Nature to answer them; and to fill up Vacuities (out of pure good Husbandry, that not an inch of Ground may be lost) present us with Flying Fishes, Tritons, and Mermaids, which spend their hours inter Pettinem & Speculum; and lest Mare del zur should still be a Desolate Wilderness, have courteously stock'd it with the Painter's Wifes Island, and Terra Incognita; at this rate are we dealt with, by this kind of Men, who love to blow up lank stories into huge Bladders, and then put something in them to make them Rattle to please Children, and yet they are but Bladders fill, though swelled with the Tympany, and Wind-Cholick.

There are also a fort of Stories, which, by the way of Courtese, we mis-call Histories. that fcorn to give us an account of any thing but dreadful, and terrible Battels, and how one great Manabove all the reft, chopt off Heads and Arms, and cut off some sheer by theWaste, and with his Trenchant-blade mowed down whole Files of Armed Enemies; the Fields allthis while running with streams of Blood, and purple Gore; and all this, with as much confidence, and exactness in every Minute Circumstance, as if, like the Familiar Damon of Paracelfus, they had been inclosed in the pommel of the General's Sword; or had hover'd, like Victory with her doubtful Wings, over both the Armies, where they might securely take notes of all that was faid or done, in Shelton's Brachygraphy: but from what Principles or Interests these Warriers were Asted; by what Rules they proceeded, with what Councels and Intrigues, designs were managed; and to what Point all these Policies steered; is as much below their Spirits

as above their Abilities, to inform us.

To secure the Reader against the sear of such Entertainment in this Narrative, let him know, that he shall meet with nothing in Fatt but what is precisely true; what of wonderment he may Encounter, was of God's own working, not of Man's inventing; let others make Tragedies to gratiste the Book-seller, and cheat the simple Buyer; we need not Peter Lillicrap's Essex Serpent, nor Livewell Chapman's Greater Monsters, to Aggrandize our Title Page; God's Works need no foyl to set them off, the greatest Beauty of Truth, is its nakedness, and Symmetry.

There is a vast difference between the most elaborate products of Art, and the most homely pieces of Nature; for though the former will needs Ape the latter, yet how pitifully does she bungle in the imitation! Look upon the subtle Point of the sinest Needle through a Microscope, and you will soon be satisfied that Art is but a Dunce, for the Needle will appear as blunt, and dull as a Drum-stick; but come and yiew one of Gods Handy-works in the same Glass, V. G. The sting of a Bee, and you shall see it perpetually Acuminated till it ends in something, which the Eye must either consess to be a Point, or Nothing; The same difference we may observe between those Romances, which are the Issues of sine Wits, and the serious, grave Contrivances of Divine Providence; what clume'd things are the Cassandra's to one of those pieces of proportion, to be seen in God's Government of this lower World! So that it were unpardonable to strive to Recommend the wonderful Providences of God to the Genius of this Age, by a Lye, or to talk deceitfully for him; whatever therefore this Narrative is, yet it's a naked Account of his own workings; and Gold needs no Gilding.

the

But now the Readers great danger lies in running over some of God's Works, and yet not seeing God in his Works: Little Children, we see, do hugely please themselves with the Gilded Covers, and Marbled Leaves of Books, but concern not themselves, what is within; and if they chance to look a little overly upon the forms and shapes of the Letters, yet understand not the sublime matter, that may be coucht in them: Now, to divide the words from the meaning, is morally to Annihilate them, and so whilst they see Letters, and Words only, they see just Nothing: There are a great many such massey sorres.

such Old Children in the World, that gaze upon the surface of Gods Works, but never are led by them to admire the Wisdom, Power, Goodness, and Holiness of God: They deal with the Works of Providence, just as they do with the Works of Creation: God has Ingraven his own Name in Legible Characters upon the Heavenly Bodies. The Stars in their fingle Beauties, their Combined Afterisms, their Mutual Aspects, their Intricate, yet Regular Motions, speak their Author; nay, upon the lowest Recreations, the Leifure-sports of Nature, there is written, Dens fecit. But now the common observer, whose thoughts are terminated by his Eye, and his Eye with the visible Heavens, as 'tis bespangled with glittering things, called Planets, and Stars, loseth quite their main design, which is to conduct and argue our thoughts up to a first Cause; for they were not so much out who cryed up the Musick of the Sphares to be so Ravishing: and we should confess it, could we but hear them Sing this Antheme, Glory be to God on High. Can we be so Bruitish, as once to imagine, that the wife God, who creates nothing little, nor for a little end, should create such great, and glorious Bodies only to be the Objects of Ignorant, and Blind Amazement? Surely no; but that by the contemplation of them, we might be led into the Admiration of Him, whole whose Being, Wisdom, Power must needs be infinitely Glorious, when his very works are excellently so: Here then will be the Readers danger, lest all his Spirits should evaporate in a confused Admiration, that a Boat, a little, a Canvas Boat should, like the Ark, convey so many Persons so many Leagues safe a Shoar, whist he misses the true intent, and meaning of it, to behold a matchful Providence (as well as the Being of a Deity,) over all Affairs. Now, that he may not split upon this dangerous Rock, but improve the Narrative to his best Advantage, I shall submissively lay before him a sew Directions.

1. Sett. Learn from this Nart arive to trust. and in all thy ways to acknowledge God, who by the most contemptible means, can effect the most considerable things. Created Beings, as they cannot act beyond the Sphere of their Attivity, so neither can they Operate further than the suitableness of their Instruments will enable them; it were ridiculous to attempt to cut down a Forrest with a Penknife, or Lave the Ocean with a Spoon; but if the great God can make the dullest Tool to cut, can serve himself of the most unfit Instruments, and accomplish the most Nobite Works with the most Wooden Engines, he will fure deserve our greatest trust and considence. As great Princes are attended with a nume rous Train of Servants, more for State, than ab folute Necessity; so God uses second causes, not because he cannot work without them, but to teach us to admire his strength, in their weakness, his All-sufficiency in their insufficiency.

rous

The Grand Seignier had heard of the famous Atchievement of Castriots Scimitar. and was very defirous to make an Experiment, whether its excellency answered the Report; he fends for it, proves it, it does no Execution; he fends it back with fcorn, and indignation, that lying Fame should magnifie a forry Ammunition Sword so far above its merits, but Scanderbeg, before the Mesfenger's Face, hews in pieces Helmets, Corflets; Go now (faies he) and tell your Mafter, Though I fent him my Sword, I did not fend hine my Arm; none can work with God's means, that has not God's Arm: Haft thou an Arm like God? Job 40. 9. Here then the Reader may see, (and if he sees not, he forfeits his Eyes) the same God who in an Ark of Butrushes preserved Moses, and in another Ark faved Noah, in a small Ganvas Souller (which was our Ark, though in a leffer Volume) wast us over the Ocean, and bring us all fate to Land: As God is feen in the Smallest works of Creation, so in the smallest Infruments of his Providence. The little Fly or Ant. expresses Creative Power and Omnipotency in Miniature, as well as the great, Caftle-bearing Elephant: I have read somewhere of a Goldsmith that made a Lock, and Key, and Chain so small, and subtle, that a Fly would draw them all about a Table, and never be stalled; surely the Siestator would not pradicate the strength of the poor Fly, but the skill of the Artist.

Est in tenuibus, & Pusillis Reculis Laus Optimiq; Maximiq; Maxima. Gaz. Pia bilar.

The Glory of the Great wife King, Shines greatly in the smallest thing.

Indeed our whole passage was wonder; Suppose we had met with one Night of Hazy Weather, we might have plyed back into the jaws of that Destruction which we had so far escaped. Had we met with one Storm (and an ordinary puff of wind had been a Storm to us) it had presently over-set us; but the fame God that commands a calm for the Halcyon, commanded Halcyon Days and Nights for us, till under the wings of his Gracious care he had hatcht his own purpofes of. Mercy, into perfect Deliverance. It was a wonder too, that in our fix Days Voyage, in the Mediterranean, the very High Road of Navigation, both for honest Men and Knaves, Merchants and Pirates, we should not meet with one Veffel, Friend or Foe: Had we met with a Friend Weffel, they had pityed us, taken usup, and then the Power of God had not been so signalized in our Preservation; had we fallen in with an Enemy, we had immediately become a Prey to their Teeth, they had smallowed us up quick, we had made but one poor Morsel to their greedy Stomachs, and thereby defeated a work of God gloriously begun, and rob'd him of the Revenue of his praise.

If then they that go down to the Sea in Ships, fee the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the deep, Psal. 107. 23,24. What Wonders, what Miracles of Providence have we feen, and may others fee in us, who went down to the Sea, not in a Ship, but in a Canoe, which for mant of a better Name we call a Boat! Let the Reader therefore admire God with me; and both of us with the Pfalmist, Psal. 86. 8. Among the Gods there is none like unto thee, O Lord; neither are there any works like thy works.

He deals unrighteously with God, who measures him by the smallness of the means that he uses, and not by the greatness of those effects he produces by those means. And therefore,

Disce a Cymbula, quisquis es; & Deo Da pro tenuibus, & pusillis Reculis, Laudem Optimoq, Maximoq, Maximam. Gaz. Pia bilar.

Let this our little Sciff thy Spirits raise, To give to this great God, thy greatest Praise. 2. Sett.

2. Sect. Let the Reader improve this Relation to fortifie his Faith against the little Cavils of Atheistical Spirits, who lay out their ill placed wit in forgeing Objections against Him that gave it. There is a Creature famous in Prov. 6. Qui latte Materno impletus calcibus petit Lastantem, that being filled with the liberal Dug, ungratefully kicks his Dam. Thus this fort of Men are ambitious to be accounted witty, in creating knots and difficulties in the Historical passages of Gods great Providences Recorded in Scripture. and particularly in his prefervation of Noah, and his Family in the Ark: But he that had feen with us the watchful Eye of God superintended, and the steddy hand of God to hold a poor Canvas Boat, built without Regular proportion, ill Victualled, without Anchor, Helm, Compass, or Tackle, and thereby preferve the Lives of five inconfiderable perfons, of no great use in the World, and after fix Days great extremity and diffress, Land them all safe, may easily Credit the Report, how the same God should preserve eight Perfons, upon whose Lives the re-peopling of the whole World did depend, in a Wesself of most exact proportions, frong built, and well laid in with all manner of Provisions. He that can fee a Creator in the works of Creation, and a Governor in the works of Providence, may reasonably believe all Divine Revelations. 3. Sett.

3. Sest. Let all that would not abuse this Narrative beware, lest whilft they are admiring Providence in this instance, if our preservation, they do not over-look those eminent appearances of God towards themselves every moment, which, though perhaps they carry not so much of Rarity in them, yet may have in them, as much of real power, wisdom, and goodness. We are apt to deal with our Mercies, just as we do with our Sins, where the commonness and frequency of either, abates and takes off from the Observation and Notice which we owe them; we gaze, and wonder at Comets, and their Flaming Beards, but seldome admire the Sun, a far more Glorious Body, because he rises and sets every Morning and Evening upon the just and the unjust; Dost thou admire God in our preservation, learn to admire him in thy own: Art thou surprized with wonder, that we were kept a few Days, when there was not half an inch between us and Death? Confider, God has kept thee many Days, and many Years,, and every minute of those many Days and Years, when there was but a hairs breadth between thee and Death: Dost thou then admire God preserved us alive in a Vesselof Cloth? Admire that God that holdeth thy Soul in Life, and that in a more frail Veffel, a Veffel of Clay: Dost thou still wonder we were not blown over with every breath breath of Wind? Admire also that the Lamp of thy Life which thou carriest in a Paper-Lanthorn, is not blown out by every blast of Sickness: But if thou wilt still wonder how such a Boat should carry us? Then wonder also how thy Food nourishes thee; how thy Cloaths keep thee warm, how thy fleep refreshes thee: There's not a moment in our Lives but is filled with real Miracle and Wonder. I will Praise thee (saies the Psalmis, Pfal. 139. 14.) for I am fearfully and wonderfully made: Let us all Praise God, for me are fearfully and wonderfull preserved. If Preservation be but a continued Creation. how should we ador: that Power that Created us once, but preserves us alwaies! God expects that we thould equally magnific his. skill in making us out of Nothing, and securing us that we drop not into Nothing: and as much admire his goodness, that we crumble not, moulder not into our Dust, as that we were at first formedout of Dust.

A. Sest. Let the Reader learn from our Slavery, to prize, and improve his own Liberty. If we serve not our God sincerely, and chearfully in plenty, he can send us where we shall serve our Enemies in want. If we glorifie him not with our Liberty, but turn it into licentiousness, he can clap as up close, where we shall learn to prize it higher, and wish we had improved it better. It argues great disinginuity and baseness in our Spirits. that we provoke our God to teach us the worth of Mercies by the want of them: The Lord does not willingly afflict, nor grieve the Children of Men, Lam. 3. 33. but we provoke him to take his Rod into his hand, and lay it smartly upon our backs, because that Folly which is bound up in our Hearts will not otherwise be lasht out of us. Thus God threatned his people of Old, Deut. 28. 48. Because thou servedst not the Lord thy God with joyfulness and gladness of Heart, for the abundance of all things, therefore shalt thou serve thine Enemies, in hunger, thirst, and nakedness, and in the want of all things. Thus he taught Judah by the Captivity of Babylon, to prize the freedom of Canaan; we might learn our Duty much cheaper from Gods Word, but we like Truants, will not learn it there, till God fends us to School with a Rod at our backs.

5. Sett. Let all Learn from hence, in what State foever the Providence of God shall place them, therewith to be content: Perhaps thou art a Servant to a Christian; dost thou murmur? It shews, thou little knowest what it is to be a Slave to an imperious Turk. Thou servest him that Prays with thee, and for thee: dost thou repine? God might have made thee serve one who would Curfe and Torture thee, and make little Provision for thy Body, and none at all for thy Soul: The Christian Religion is surely the most excellent Religion in the World, because it holds the ballance so even between Superiours and Inferiours: It enjoyns the one to give the most full Obedience, and yet prohibits the other to exercise Rigour. It is peremptory for Duty, and yet abhors Tyranny: whoever has known Turkish Stavery, is obliged to become a more Loyal Subjett, a more Dutiful Child. a more Faithful Servant; and whoever has not known it, is yet obliged to become all these, lest God make him know it, and whip out of him that Restiff Spirit of grumbling, and Disobedience with the Briars, and Thornsof the Wilderness.

God commanded all Masters among the Jews, to allow their Servants a Day of Rest, Deut. 5. 14. and he gives this Reason for it, Remember that thou wast a Servant in the Land of Egypt. The Equity of which Reafon holds stronger for the Christian: Remember thou wast a Servant to the worst of Masters, a Drudge in the basest of works, and lyable to receive the worst of Wages: Has Christ fet thee free? And art thou become a Servant to the best of Masters? Employed in the most reasonable, and honourable Services? And in expettation of the most glorious Rewards ? Letitteach thee if thou beeft a Master, to command gently; and if a Servant, to obey chearfully. 6. Sett.

6. Sett. Let all Learn to walk worthy of the Gospel. It is that which sweetens all our mercies, and mitigates the bitterness of all Afflictions; and if we fin away that, we either fin away all the rest, or whatever is useful, and desireable in all the rest. If we enjoy the Light, and yet walk in darkness, it's righteous with God, to over-spread our Habitations with Egyptian, or Babylonish, Turhish, or Popish darkness. God can carry us to Rome, or Algiers; or else send Rome, and Algiers home to us: For what should a a People do with Light, that only intend to play, or fight by it? The once Famous Churches of Afa, are now wallowed up by the Ottoman Sword, and the Mahumetan Unbelief; and those sometimes Famous Cities, Carthage, and Hi, po, which knew those burning and shining Lights, Cyprian, and Augustine, are now possess with Moors, and defiled with the Abominations of the greatest Impostor that ever seduced the Nations, but One. And thinkest thou, O Man, O Christian, that do'ft these things, so Alien from the Gospel of Christ; that art drunk in the day, and curfest that God whom thou Worshippest, that thou shalt escape the Judgmem of God? Itell thee, nay; and Itell all those that read these lines, and are guilty; and I tell my felf, so far as I am guilty, that except we repent, we shall all likewise perish. The

The Lord Jesus Christ, in his Epistle to the Church of Ephefus, gives her this Memorial Rev. 2.5. Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and Repent, and do thyfirst work, or else I will come unto thee quickly, and remove thy Candlestick out of its place, except thou Repent: But Eshefus would none of his Counsel, none of his Caution; and Christ was as good as his word, he put out her Candle, and removed her Candlestick. I have often wondered, what should be the grounds of their confidence, who speak as if the Gospel were entailed upon England, by vertue of some Ancient Charter; asif God would make us Exceptions from his General Rule, which is to take away abused, destised means, and mercies, and we must own much of prerogative in our case; but yet let us Rejoyce with trembling, left when Prophaneness and Debauchery dog Religion so closeatthe beels, she fly not thither, where she may find better Quarter: It has made great Impression upon me when I read the Divine Herbert, in his Church Militant;

> Religion stands on Tip-toe in onr Land, Ready to pass to the American Strand; When height of Malice, and Prodigious Lusts

Impudent sinning; Witchcrafts, and Distrusts,

B

The

(The Marks of future bane) shall fill our Cup Unto the Brim, and make our Measure up, &c.

7. Sett. Let it be every Man's care to be found in Gods way: The Promise of Protection is annext to Gods way, Pfal. 91.11. He shall give his Angelscharge over thee to keep thee in all thy ways: And the Bleffing of God is annext to to his own way too, Pfal. 128. 1. Bleffed is every one that feareth God, and walketh in his ways. When we are over-taken with the evil of Affliction, let the first Question we propound to our selves be this. Am Inot in the way of Transgression? Did this danger find me in my Duty? Was I in Gods High-way, or in some by path of my own? Was I doing his work? Serving his Glory? If we observe not the way of his Precepts, I know no Reason we should plead the Promise of his Protéction. There are two things upon which I look upon it as my great Duty to Reflect; First, whether we were in the way Gods Precepts when we fell into our Enemies Hands? Secondly, whether we were in the way of Gods Promise when weescaped out of their Hands? For the former, I am abundantly fatisfied, that we were in the way of our Duty; for we were fent out by Commission from the Right Honour, able, Robert, Earl of Warnick, the Lord Say, and the Lord Brook, who by Patent from Hi-Majesty

To.

ti

ne

he

th

H

Majesty King Charles the First, were Governours of the Isle of Providence, whither we were bound: For the latter, If the more severe Reader shall make it a Question, Whether we could in Faith expett Protection in an Adventure visibly jorash, and pracipitous? And shall determine it against us, that we tempted God by casting our selves upon extraordinary Protection, expecting deliverance without warrant, in a way little on this fide miracle: I shall first fay Let him shun that Rock in his own Conversation, upon which he supposes us to have dasht: Let our Ship-wrack be a Buoy to warn him of the like presumption, and let him learn more wifdom, at our coft and charges. I shall further say, let him not discover greater rashnessin censuring our Adventure, then he charges upon our Adventure, but modestly consider himself, lest be also be tempted: and if we were guilty of folly, he may thus gain wisdom by our folly. But I shall add, Extremity of Mifery is none of the best Counsellers; let him put himself under our Circumstances, and if Cowardile did not hinder him from making our Attempt, I am confident Conscience would not: Our Lives were bitter to us by Reason of cruel Bondage, and (though mine was at that time much mitigated) yet there is a secret Magnetisme in a Native Soil, with which our Hearts being once strongly toucht, could never admit of the least variation, but still pointed directly Hemewards; and fuch a Landtoo, as was like

. f

a T G b C

n

W

it

sc G

ag th th

ny fr

W

th

M

ge

Goshen, all Light, when the Land of our Captivity was like Egypt, both for Slavery and Darkness, that might both be felt; and we thought it below Men, for the Love of Life, to lose the Reasons of our Lives, for All may have (If they dare try) a Glorious Life or Grave. Herb.Ch. Porch.

In a word, though success will not warrant an evil Attion, yet there's much of justification in it, on the behalf of those which are not so; nor did we tempt God towork Miracles, but trusted him to afford us special Protestion; But if this will not satisfie, let none imitate us wherein we failed, but rather admire Divine Condescention, that engaged in our Deliverance, notwithst and

ing our failing.

8. Sett. Let all that read this Narrative be instructed never to promise them selves great matters from Men: I have observed it in the whole course of our Captivity, and constant Tenous of those Gracious Providences which brought us thence, and the Series of Mercy, Wisdom, and Power, that was our Convoy Home, that we ever found most of Favour from God, when we expected least from Men: and the least of kindness from those where we might, or thought we might in Reason have promised our selves most. When we met with unexpested Friend. ship, God would teach us to own himself. . When we met with dif-appointment, God would teach us the folly of Idolizing the Creature: I have feriously admired the Compassion and Relief we found at Mayork, and yet we knew them to be Romanists, and they knew us to be Protestants, and ham little respect we found frome some of our own Countrey, at Alicant, Cadiz, and St. Lucars, and yet we were tyed together in the strictest Triple Bonds of Un Dien, Un Roy, Un Ley, One God, One King, One Law: But God was feen in both. I could Relate a Passage during our Captivity in Algiers, that had more of bitterness in it, than in all our Slavery; and yet they were Christians, not Algerines; Protestants, not Papists; English-men, not Strangers, that were the cause of it: But I have put a force upon my felf, and am resolved notto publish it. In our Return homewards, we met with some who would talk to the grief of those whom God had wounded, and was now in a way to heal again. Some would interpretatively fay, with the Churlish Nabal, I Sam. 25. 10. Who are these? And whence come they? There are many Servants now adays that break away, every one from his Master. But then was the season when we had most Experience of Gods faithfulness: And I shall never cease to own before the World the great Respect we found from some English Merchants, to whom we were perfe? Strangers; and the Civilities of Captain Goodson, Captain

e

e

r

15 d

r

C

Captain Smith, his Mate, and his Son, are not to be forgotten.

Perhaps, after all this, the Reader will be earnest to be fatisfied, why this Narrative has lain so long Dormant, and appeared no sooner in the World? And I shall herein also endeayour to give him all Reasonable satisfaction.

1. When we return'd into England, we found our Native Country embroyled in a Civil War, and most Men had enough to do, to bear their own personal Calamities, and had little need to be troubled with the miseries of others; they were other kind of Declarations that slew abroad then, and that was enough to super-sede a Narrative of this Nature, for some Years.

2. The great Mercies of God have not alwaies their due weight upon our Hearts at first; and I have received signal Deliverances from eminent dangers since that great one; and it's well if all the mercies of our Lives, all our Deliverances put together, will amount to an Argument strong enough to overcome our backwardness to make publick acknowledgments.

3. Ithought a long while that it was not worth the while, to trouble the World with my particular Concerns, till the Importunity of feveral Ministers, and others, both in City and Country, overcame my reluctancy, in whose Reasons I did acquiesce.

4. I was conscious to my self of great unfitness to recommend it to publick view, in such a garb

garb as might vindicate it from Contempt; for though it has been drawn out many years with my own hand, and many have had the perusal of it; have approved it, and desired it; yet till I could prevail with a Friend to teach it to speak a little better English, I could not be perswaded to let it walk abroad; The Stuff and Matter is my own, the Trimming and Form is anothers, for whom I must vouch, that he has done the Truth, my felf, and the Reader Justice.

Having overcome all these difficulties, I do. here Erest my Ebenezer, as a small Monument of great Mercy, and as an Obligation upon my Soul to great Duty, and do pray that it may stand as an Abiding Witness for God in my Conscience; that when-ever I am tempted to Sin, I may have an Answer ready to stop the Mouth of the Tempter with Indignation; How can I do this great Evil, and Sin against my good God? When I am tempted to distrust, I may encourage my Faith from my own Narrative, Laying, Remember that God who delivered thee at Sea; when I am tempted to murmur, I may suppress those mutinous thoughts from my own Narrative, faying, Remember what thou endured in Algiers. When my Heart grows cold, and unthankful, I may chide, and shame it, from my own Narrative, into gratitude to God; That God, who remembred us in our low Estate, for his Mercy endureth for ever! who preserved us at the Sea, the Great Sea; for his Mercy endureth for ever 1

15

n

ever! and secured us in a Boat, a Contemptible Boat, for his Mercy endureth for ever! who gave us favour in the Eyes of Strangers, for his Mercy endureth for ever! and opened to us the Hearts of Enemies; for his Mercy endureth for ever! and taught us to look up to his never failing Mercy, when Friends failed, for his Mercy endureth for ever! who turned us safe to England, for his mercy endureth for ever! we called upon him in the day of Trouble, he delivered us, and we will glorifie him.

Reader, this Narrative is true, peruse it serioufly, and let not Vanity tempt thee to fay, Things might have been better contrived, wiselier managed; it was God that did what was Good in All; call not his Wisdom in Question, because he did not create more wonders to gratifie thy itching Humour; perhaps thou wouldft have had us been brought over upon a Floating Island, or in a Whales Belly, but I do not underfland that the great God is bound to work Miracles to fave Mens longings: God has done his work well, and none can mend it; for, what can the Man do that comes after the King? Eccl. 2. 12. For the matter of Fast Recorded herein, I might fafely call God to Record upon my Soul that I he not: The thing is known to many, and has been fifted, and fcann'd by fuch Eyes and Ears as are not guilty of easie Credu-Ifty; I have Evidence that may from the most obstinate unbelief: Mr. Thomas Saunders, my Wife's Brother, being in Mayork not long after we came from thence, faw our Boat hang up for a Monument upon the side of the great Churh there. Mr. Robert Hales, who was there 1671. assures me he saw the naked Ribs and Skeleton of it then hanging in the same place. Now, I assure thee, Reader, I should be much assamed of my self, if Strangers unconcerned in my Personal Deliverances, should be so far concerned as to preserve a Memorial of them, and yet unthankful I should Erect no Standard or Piller as an Evidence of Gods wonderful appearing for me.

It's true, I am informed by one, that some affirm, there are more Boats hanging up in Mayork, in Memory of some such like escape: Now, if others have really escaped the same danger, by the same means, it greatly confirms our Narrative; and I do heartily rejoyce, Providence has appeared in the same Method for others, as for our felves: we never intend to Monopolize Gods Providences to our fole use and bed hoof; and we rejoyce if our attempt and fuccels may have encouraged others to make the like attempt, and have found the like success; but I do affert it with great confidence, that when we were in Mayork, there was no such Boat hanging up, but the Inhabitants there entertained our Deliverance as such whereof they had no parallel: But if on the other fide, thefe, or some of these succeeding Boats were but Imremarkable towards us, that we really were the Subjects of such wonder which others durst only pretend to; and it sets a lustre upon this great Salvation, which others have thought so considerable, that they judged it worth the while to tell a Lye to entitle themselves to the Credit of it; for it's Gold and Silver, not Copper, or baser Metals, that they who drive the Coyning

Trade, strive to Counterfeit.

Let then everyone that reads, understand, and feriously sit down, and consider with himself, whether he has not had many eminent Personal Deliverances in one kind or other, which this Marvellous Providence of God towards us may not refresh his Memory withal; and if he shall hence be taught to blush at his forgetfulness of lapled Mercies; if this Narrative shall recover any lost Providencies, and fix them on, and river into his Soul; if he shall find himself awakened to do thankfulness to God for all his benefits towards him; let him joyn with me in ascribing all the Power, and therefore all the Glory, to the Almighty, and let him kindly accept the affiftance of him, who shall reckon it amongst his other Mercies, to have been Serviceable to any one in reviving a better frame of Heart. I am.

Reader,

Thy Friend, and Servant,

W. Okeley.

ASMALL

MONUMENT

OFGREAT

MERCY.

SECT. I.

A Brief Account of those Providences Which led towards our Captivity in Algiers.

THIS Narrative would be too happy, if it should not meet with some hasty and impatient Spirits, that grudge the timethat's spent in Preface and Introduction; and such as these, are wild to come at the Story of the East; all the rest is but one great tedious Impertinency, they's they'l not give a Figg for all the other. Ishall make never the more haste for unreasonable Importunity; but the Remedy is in their own hands, they may turn over a few leaves, and meet with it in its proper place, if they sit upon Thorns. But to the more judicious and considerate, it will be acceptable to know how our Foot was taken in the Snare, as well as how the Snare was broken, and we delivered.

In the Month of June, in the Year of Our Lord, One Thousand, Six Hundred, Thirty, and Nine, in pursuance of a Commission from the Right Honourable, the Earl of Warwick, the Lord Say, and the Lord Brook, we took Ship at Gravesend, in the Mary of London, carrying Six Guns, Mr. Boarder being Master, and James Walker the Masters Mate; the Ship was chiefly Laden with Linnen and Woollen Cloath, having in her, Seamen and Passengers, above Sixty, bound for the Ise of Providence in the West-Indies. Five Weeks we lay in the Downs, wishing, and waiting for a Wind, and then we fet Sail, and came to Anchor near the The of Wight; but by this time all our Beer in the Ship stunk, and we were forced to throw it overboard, and to take in Vinegar to mix with Water for our Voyage. The next Lord's Day we set Sail again, and coming between the Island, and the Main Land, we stuck faft in the Sands, but the Tide coming in, hove us off. These Circumstances seem very inconsiderable derable to those that were not concerned in the Products of them; but God has given us the advantage and leifure to see what great things were in the Womb of these little things. Had the Wind stood longer against us, it had been more for us, and the danger had been past; had it stood less while against us, it had been for us too, and we had been gone past the danger: But God appoints it the Moment when it should come about to blow us into the Mouths of our Enemies: We see the Truth of that, Te know what to pray for: We prayed for a Wind, and we had a Whirl-wind: If we alwaies knew what mischief the Answer of our Prayers would do us, we should be glad to eat our words, and Pray against our Prayers. Denyal is often the best Answer, and we had need leave all Petitions to the wisdom of God to be Interpreted, according to his good pleasure, and returned as they may be good for us, and make most for his own Glory: we were also taught, that the Sea may sometimes be our best Friend, and the Earth our worst Enemy; and that nothing can do us good or burt, but by the Direction and Commission of the Almighty.

We were now three Ships in Company, and one of the other I remember, carried Nine Guns, Mr. Church, Master. The Sixth Day after our fetting Sail from the Isle of Wight, by break of Day in the Morning, we discovered three Ships about three or four Leagues to Leeward: The Masters of our Ships presently confulted, what was most adviseable; whether to stay and speak with them, or to make the best of our way; at last (upon what Reasons I know not) it was determined that we should stay; It was not long before we discovered those other three Ships to be Turks Menof War, who espying their Prey, endeavoured to come up with us, which about Night they affected: Whilst they were coming up, the Masters of our Ships feemed refolloed to Fight them, and accordingly made preparation to receive them, but in the Night, the Master and Company of the Ship wherein I was, altered their Counsels, let their Resolutions Dye, and agreed to run for it; uncertain Counfels never produce better success; when we might have gone, then we would stay; and when there was no way to escape, then we musts needs attempt it: Had we either at first Resolved not to Fight them, or resolved to Fight, had prosecuted our Resolutions lie Men of Courage, we might, perhaps, either have avoided the danger, or bravely Master'd it. The Turks perceiving us begin to run, fent one of their number to Chase us, whilft their other two attended the remaining two of our Company till the Morning. At break of Day they began to Fight us, and after a short Dispute Boarded us, and took us all three: In the Mary, fix were flain, and many wounded; sofmall was the difference between Flight and Fight; but that the Death and Wounds of those

those that five, are dishonourable; but of them that Fight, beautiful, and Glorious.

Many Weeks they kept us close Prisoners at Sea; we found many Englishmen in their Ships, Slaves, like our selves, from whom we had no other Comfort, but the Condoling of each others Miseries, and that from them we learnt a smattering of the Common Language, which would be of some use to us when we should come to Algiers, whither, after five or six Weeks we were brought.

SECT.

SECT. II.

The Description of Algiers, with their Manner of Buying, and Selling Slaves.

A Lgier is a City very pleasantly scituated on the side of the Hills, over-looking the Mediterranean, which lyes North of it; and it lifts up its proud Head so Imperiously, as if it Challenged a Soveraignty overthole Seas, and .. expected Tribute from all that shall look within the Streights. It lyes in the 30th. Degree of Longitude, and hath somewhat less than 35 Degrees of North-Latitude: The City is con-Ederably large, the Walls being above three Miles in Compass, beautified and strengthned with five Gates: Port-Marine towards the North, and Port Piscadore not far from thence, and Porta-Nova towards the South; built, as they report, by the Spaniard, whilst it was in their Possession: The West-Gate, which they call Bubawite, and the Eastern-Gate, which in their Tongue is called Bubazoon: They have also several strong Castles besides that upon the Point of the Mole, so that the Town is judged impregnable. The City is built very flately, and yet more strong than stately; and more Famous Famous than strong, but not more Famous for any thing than for Infamy, being the Retreat, the Nest of those Turkish Corfairs, which have long Tyranniz'd in, and been a Terror to the Neighbouring Seas. It is supposed by some to contain Four Thousand Families, by others, Fourscore Thousand Persons; but they must needs be very short in their Reckoning, it having been Judged, that of all Nations there could be no less than Twenty Five Thousand Slaves. The Private Buildings are very beautiful, flat Roofd. Adorned with Galleries towards their Courts, supported by Pillars: And they may afford to Build sumptuously, because they Build at other Mens cost, and with other Mens hands: Their Temples are also very Magnificent, and much too good for their Religion, whose Practice and Conversation speaks them to say, There is no God. And yet we Read of a Religious Thief. who never went about the works of his Calling (for fo he called stealing) but he would folennly implore the affifance of his Idol; A ftrange God, fure; that would be accessary to his Devoto's Robberies: And a strange Worshipper, that either hoped to flatter to his God become his Accomplice in Villary, with the Vow of agood round share of the Booty, or would be such a Fool, to think that God worth the Worshippingthat should be thus flatterd. They have allo many stately Baths, to which the Men refort in the Morning, and the Women in the Afternoon.

ternoon; But they want one, worth them all, wherein they might by Faith and Repentance wash away their filthiness.

To this fair City we were brought, yet in our Eyes it was most ugly and deformed; for the French Proverb is universally true, Il n'y a point de bel Prizon. There is no such thing as a fair Prison. I confess, for a Goal, it's one of the best Built that I have seen; there's nothing that the Soul of Man bears with more regret than Restraint: The Body it self is judged by fome to be but the Soul's Little-ease, or Cage; where though it seems to Dwell, yet 'tis but in Honourable Durance; and though it dares not break the Prison, yet it listens, and longs for a Goal-Delivery: There can be nothing large enough for a Soul but God, from whom fince ir once at first came, it must needs be restless till it return to him again; and furely it has much forgot it felf, and extract, if it can take up with satisfaction in any thing on this side its Creator.

As soon as we were ashore, for the first Night we were lock'd down in a deep nasty Cellar; some inconveniences we felt, but they were nothing to what we seared: The next day we were carried, or led, or rather driven to the Vice-Roys, or Bashaw's Palace, who according to the Custom, and his own Right, is to have the Tenth Man for his Dividend of the Slaves.

When the next Market-day came, we were driven like Beafts thither, and exposed to Sale; and there is a great deal of God's goodness in that one word, that it was not to the Slaughterhouse to be Butcher'd, as well as to the Market to. be Sold. Their Cruelty is great, but their Covetousness exceeds their Cruelty; could they make as much of us Dead, as they make alive, that so both the Interests of Cruelty, and of Covetoushess, might be secured, and reconciled, we were well affured which way it should have gene with us. But it must be a great deal of Tallow and Fat, that will answer two of three Dollers a Month.

Their manner of selling Slaves, is this. They lead them up and down the Fair, or Market; and when a Chapman bids any Money, they prefently cry, a-Rache! a-Rache! that is. Here's so much Money bidden, who bids more? They that cheapen the exposed Slaves are very circumspect persons, they carry their Eyes in their Heads as well as their Money in their Purfes, and use the one in laying out the other; for they are loath to buy a Pig in a Poke; their first Policy is to look in their Mouths; and a good, strong, entire set of Grinders will advance the Price confiderably, and they have good Reafon for this Practice: for first, they are Rational Creatures, and know, that they who have not Teeth, cannot eat, cannot work; and they that cannot work, are not for their tuen; and they that are not for their turn, are not for their Money. And Secondly, they intend to keep themat hard meat all the Year, and it must not be Gums, but folid Teeth (nay, if it were tossible, case-hardn'd Teeth) that must chem it; and when all is done, they had need of the Ofriches Stomach to digest it. Their next procels is to feel their Limbs; as whether there be any Fracture, or Diflocation in the Bones; any thing Analogical to Spavin, or Ring-bone, for these will bring down the Makret wonderfully; And to be clean Limb'd, close coupled, well joynted, will advance it as much. The Age is very considerable; but they that sell them, did not breed them, and thereforethey know nothing, more or less of that: Two waies they have to find out the Age; the one is, to stand to the courtefie of the Slaves, but they are not bound to make any fuch Discovery, and therefore they go by general conjectures from the Beard, Face, or Hair; but a good fet of Teeth will make any one Ten Years Younger, and a broken one Ten Years Older than the Truth; for if they were Five Hundred Years Old allis a Case, if they could but eat and work; or if they could not eat, vet if they could but work, or if they neither eat nor work, if their Skins would but fetch in the Mony again. You shall have the Seller commend his Goods to the Sky, and the Buyer on the other hand, as much undervalue them, and the true Market-price commonly lies just between them; but so it is all the World over. Or faies the Seller, mark what a Back he has, what a breadth he bears between the Shoulders! What a Cheft! How frong fet! How fitted on the nonce for Burdens! He'l do but e'ne to much work. Pish, saies the Buyer, He looks like a Pillard, like a very Meacock at his Provinder, and one that seems to be surfeited. But they are very curious in examining the Hands; for if they be callous and brawny, they will shrewdly guess they have been inured to Labour; if delicate and tender, they will suffect some Gentleman, or Merchant, and then the hopes of a good Price of Redemption makes him Saleable.

When any are fold, they must be trotted once more to the Vice-Roys, that he may have the review of them, and if he likes any of them at the prizes they went off at, there's no more

Dispute, they are his own.

As for my self, I was sold the first Marger-day to a Tagareen; and that the Reader may not stumble at that hard word, he may understand; That when the Moors were driven out of Spain by Ferdinand the Great, they, upon their return into Africa, assumed Names that might argue Gentility, and be an Evidence of their Ancient Extrast, from such places where they had been great Dons, and accordingly there are many Familiesthus denominated; as Tagareens, Jarbeens, &c.

SECT. III.

An Account of some Difficulties that I met with during my Captivity in Algiers.

Those Miseries which it is dreadful to endure, are yet delightful to be remembred; and there's a secret pleasure to chew the Cud, and ruminate upon escaped dangers: However, the Reader may afford to run over with his Eye in an hour, that which I ran through in five Years; and supposing himselfsafe upon the Amphitheatre, may behold poor Slaves

Combating with Beafts below.

The first Adventure I met with after I was brought to my Patron's House (for so I must now stile him) had well nigh cost me my Life. My Patron's Father being desirous to see his Sons Penny-worth, commanded me up into a Gallery, which looked into the Court; he began to insult over me with insupportable scorn, reflecting upon me because I was a Christian, and cast out some Expressions which did really restect upon the Person of my Rdeemer, though I have heard worse since.) My Neck was not yet bowed, nor my Heart broken to the Yoke of Bondage; I could not well brook, because I had not ben used then to such Language; and because because I could not express my self in the Moresco, or Lingua Franc, Isupplyed it with Signs; and imitating the Coblers Yarke, I fignified both waies as well as I could, That their Prophet was but a Cobler. I confess, my meaning was no more, but that Mahomet, by the help of Sergius, a Neftorian Monk, and Abdalla the Jew, had patch'd up a Cento of Fewish, and Monkish Fopperies, which was now their Religion. But he, without the preamble of many Railing words, fell upon me with severe blows; whatever Rage and Fury his Hands or Feet could Execute, that I felt; and my intreaties did but enrage his Choler, so that I saw I might sooner blow out the Fire with a pair of Bellows, than lenifie his passion with Prayers; I had no other way but this, to make an offer of leaping down out of the Gallery into the Court, and therefore clapping my hands upon the Rails, as if I would throw my felf head-long down over them, and rather chuse to receive my Death from the Pavement, than his Hands, he presently asswages, if not his Rage, yet the Execution of it. The Old Gentleman knew very well, that if I lost my Life, his Son must lose his present Money, and future profit; for there's little made out of a Dead Man's Skin: and therefore he respites my further punishment till my Patron's Return, and then indeed this reputed Blasphemy of mine with full cry was carried to his Pars, and it lof nothing in the telling, but was aggravated to purpose: My Patron being Naturally a very passionate Man, said nothing, but without Examination, drew out his long Knife, (which they constantly wear by their fides) and made at me; and had there doubtless put an end to my Life and Captivity at once, had not his Wife, who was there seasonably present, taken him in her Arms, and fweeten'd him into more moderate Counfels. Some will be ready enough to fay, that I was but a Martyr to my own Folly: This was not a place for Dispute, but Obedience. Well, I learnt from hence two Leflons: One, That when the Body is a Slave, the Reason must not expest to be free; and where the whole outward Man is in Bondage, the Tongue must not plead Exemption. A Second, That it's fair for Slaves to enjoy the freedom of their own Consciences, without Reviling anothers Religion, though errone-ous; and this Wit I bought, as it fell out, a pretty good Penny-worth.

When the Storm was over, my employment was assigned me (for they had rather see a Slave Dead than Idle) and for about half a Year it lay in trudging on Errands, bearing Burdens, and discharging other Domestick Services at Command, wherein the only confideration was, That it was Commanded, and not

What was Commanded.

of War, which carried Twe've Guns: She be ing at Sea (with some others of the same place) met with an English Merchant, Laden with Plate, and other Rich Commodities from Spain, and Bound for London, (one Isaac being Master) and after a very sharp, though short Dispute, the Algerines earried her, and brought her safe home. The Adventurers divide their Booty, and being high slown with this success, they Resolve to fit her out again to carry more Guns; and from hence grew my new employment. Upon the Carpenters I attended, waited on the Smiths, to get the Iron-work sitted, and sinished; and truly he allowed me more for Portage than to the ordinary Hammels, or common Porters.

Of great Mercy.

When this Ship was now fitted for another Adventure, my Patron tells me, I must go in her; it was a nipping word: I pleaded, that I was no Sea-man, understood nothing of the Mariners Art, and therefore as he could expect little Service from me in that kind, so I must expect most rigorous treatment, because I could not acquit my felf in the Service as well as others; he removed my Pleas, and promisefed I should not be wronged; but there was more at the bottom than all this: For here a Case of Conscience offered it self. Whether I might without Sin in any Cafe fight against Christians, on the Port of the common Enemy of all Christianity? The best Resolution I could give my felf, was this; That first, my employ-my employment would only lie in managing the Tackle, which will kill no Body; but it was replied, That without the due management of the Tackle, all the Guns in the Ship would kill no Body: Secondly, therefore I answered, That it was not evident that they would engage against Christians more than all the rest of Mankind, for all the World are their Enemies, who are Rich enough to invite them, and too weak to relift them; but my Patron had a Solution worth all these: He told me peremptorily, Imust, and should go; I found my self under force, I was a Prest Man: who could not examine the Justice of the Cause. In a word, his Commands were back'd with Compulsion, and whatever his Authority was, he had more Power, than I had Courage to deny, or Strength to refift; and go I did. Yet this I will say for him, he spoke to the Captain and Officers of the Ship, to treat me civilly, that is, less cruelly than other Slaves were treated: He gave me some Money also in my. Pocket, bought me Clothes, and laid me in Provision above the Ships allowance.

Nine Weeks we were at Sea, within, and without the Streights, Cruifing, and Pickarooning up and down, at last we met with one poor Hungarian French Man of War, whom we took, and so returned.

My Patron having been at great charges in fitting, and manning out this Ship, and the Repri-

to ſe

for for T

Reprifals fo flenderly answering his great cost, and greater hopes, told me, I must allow him two Dollers per Month, and Live ashore where I would, and get it were I could. This was a hard Chapter, That he that could not maintain himself, should be compelled to contribute to the maintenance of another; it was difficult to raise encrease out of no stock, and to pay Interest out of no Principal; but there was no contending; It cost me much debate with my felf, and I turn'd my thoughts into all forms and shapes, but all Projects that presented themselves were incumbred with so many difficulties, that they amounted very near to impossibilities. The more I consulted, the further I found my self from a conclusion, and I could fee no way but one, (but that was worth a Thousand, could I have made the best of it,) and that was to commit my felf to God, who had brought me into this strait, befeeching him that he would bring me out of it.

But that my trusting to God might not be a Cloak for Laziness, or a Pillow for Sloath to rest upon, I address my self to an English-man, whose condition was that of a Slave, whose Calling was that of a Taylor. He at first word counselled me to come and stay with him, and he would teach me to work of his Trade. I accounted nothing base that was honest, and necessity would ennoble a far meaner Emploiment, and very readily closed in my thoughts with his motion, and was fuddenly elevated into huge hopes that I should now be in a capacity to answer my Patron's demands, and efcape his lash. But my straits were not (it seems) great enough to glorifie God; nor my condition mean enough to magnifie his Power in raifing me; I was not reduced to that Extremety which would make an oportunity to exalt his appearing Mercy; for when I came to him the next Day, I perceived by his silence that his mind was changed, and I was loth, either out of Modesty or Pride, to give him further trouble; and therefore interpreting his filence to be a more civil way of denial, I left him, and once more Launched out into the wide World.

In this forlorn posture I wandred, but neither knew, nor much cared whither, though the wise God both knew, and cared; and his Providence directed me to another Englishman, who was sitting in a little Shop: He asked me what News? And (as that which is uppermost alwaies comes out first) I presently began the Story of my desperate Condition; how the Rigid Law of my Patron had imposed two Dollers ser Month upon me, and I knew not where to levy the least Mite of it: He heard, considered, pityed my Condition, and invited me to come and sit in the Shop with him; but seeing nothing but the bare Walls, I asked him, to what end? What Trade should

we

bo C

we drive there? There's not much difference between starving in the Streets, and in the Shop. Country-man(saidhe) I drive here an unknown Trade; here I sell Lead, Iron, Shot, Strong-waters, Tobacco, and manyother things. This motion was a great deal to good to be refueld, and I think at that time no tolerable condition would have stek with me.

I acquainted my Patron with my Defign, pleaded I wanted flock to fet up with; he lent me a fmall modicum, and with another pittance that I had privately referved of my own, I began to Trade. That very Night I went and bought a parcel of Tobacco, the next Morning we dress'd it, cut it, and fitted it for Sale; and the World seemed to smile on us wonderfully: In this way of Partner-ship we continued for fome while, and what we got clear, we divided every week according to the proportion of our respective stocks. In a while, finding the World to come in upon us, we ventured upon no less then a whole Butt of Wine, some Money we had, and some Credit: This Wine we drew out, and got confiderably by it. But it's very difficult to maintain moderation in an exalted State, for even our State was capable of better and worse; for my Partner being clevated with our good success, grew a good Fellow, and a bad Husband; neglecting his business, went tipling, and sndling up and down, and the Concerns of the Shop and Trade lay wholly upon my Shoulders.

It fell out, that one John Randal, who with his Wife and Child were taken in the same Ship with my felf, being put to the same shifts with my felf, and, as 'tis very common, having a Monthly Tax imposed upon him by his Patron, which he must scrape out where he could, and besides maintain himself, his Wife, and Child, went up and down feeking for Relief, at last the poor Man straggled to our Shop: His Case made great impression upon me, I could not but confider the goodness of God to me, that should now be in a condition to advise, and help another, who so lately wanted both my felf; and it had this operation upon me, that I would not fuffer a poor distressed Country-man, a Fellow-Captive, a Fellow-Christian to stand begging at that door, where I had so lately stood my self: Shall I shut the Door, or my Heart upon him, when God hath opened a Door of hopeto me in the day of my Trouble? Shall I so ill requite the Lord's kindnessto me? Surely that God who comforts us in our Tribulations, expects that we should comfort others in theirs, 2 Cor. 1.4. bad him therefore come in, and knowing him to be a Glover by Trade, advised him to learn to make Canvas Cloaths for Sea-men that are Slaves; and for my own part, he should sit Rent-free; but if my Partner would infift upon his Moiety, he must be willing to satisfie him, for I had no power to determine of another's Right.

It were tedious to trouble the Reader how I wore out three or four irksome Years in this way of Trading. All this while there was no dawning of deliverance from our Bondage: As one Year left us, another found us, and delivered us over Captives to the next: Our condition was bad, and in danger every day of being worse, as the mutable Humours of our Patrons determin'd upon us, for our Shop and Trade was no free-hold: The Truth is. in time we were so habituated to Bondage, that we almost forgot Liberty, and grew stupid, and fenfless of our Slavery; like Iffachar, we couched down between our burdens, we bowed our Shoulders to bear, and became Servants to Tribute. Gen. 49. 14, 15. And were in danger to be like those Ifraelites in Babylon, who being oncefettled, forgot Canaan, and dwelt with the King for his work, I Chron. 4. 23. We seem'd as if: our Ears had been bored, and we had vowed to serve our Parrons for ever. Long Bondage breaks the Spirits, it scatters hope off, and difcourages all attempts for freedom: And there were more evils attended our condition than the bodily torture, which we were alwaies li-able to, and fometimes endured.

I. We were under a perpetual temptation to deny the Lord that bought us, to make our Souls Slaves, that our Bodies might recover Liberty. As Satan once tempted Job to Curfe God, and Dye; so he knew how to change his

Note-

Note to us, and accommodate his Snare to our condition, to Curfe God, that we might Live. How many have made Ship-wrack of Faith, that they might not be Chained to the Galliess? I can never enough admire the grace of that Promise, Pfal. 1253. The Rod of the wicked shal not always rost upon the lot of the Righteous, lest the Righteous put forth their hands to Iniquity; nor ever enough adore the faithfulness of him, who will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able, 1 Cor. 10. 13.

And 2. Evil is the unmaning, and dispiriting of the Soul to worthy Actions; for we are apt to put on the Temper and Spirit of Slaves with the Habit, and the Christians of the Greek Communion, are a very sad instance of this Truth.

And 3. We were very much at a loss for the Preaching of the Word: And yet herein the Gracious God stept in for our Relief.

S. C.T.

SECT. IV.

How God Provided for our Souls, by sending us an Able Minister to Preach the Gospel to us in our Bondage.

THE gracious God looking upon the affli-L Stion of his poor Servants, and Remembring us in our low Estate, was pleased many waies to mitigate the load of our Captivity: We have Realon to fay, with the Church, Ezrag. 9. We were Bondsmen, yet our God bath not forfaken us in our Bondage, but bath extended Mercy to in, to give us a reviving, and a Nail in his Hoty place : And thus he brought about his Defign of Grace and Mercy. There was an English Ship taken by some of our Algerine Pirates, and in her one Mr. Devereux Sprat, a Minister of the Gospel. It deserves our consideration, and greatest Admiration, that the wife God should supply our Necessities at the cost and charges of others of his dear Servants: But thus Providence sent Joseph into Egypt, where he endured thirteen Years Slavery, that he might preferve the Lives of his Fathers Family, within those narrow walls the most visible Church of God in those daies was enclosed, Gen. 45. 5. Now, some of us observing this Mr. Sprat to be a Perfon of very Sober, Grave, and Religious Deportment, we addressed our selves to him, and humbly entreated him that we might enjoythe benefit of his Ministry; in Order whereto, we defired him that he would compound with his Patron at to much amonth as he could, and because we were abundantly convined of our Duty to administer to him of our Carnal things, who should administer to us of his Spirituals, we congacid to allow him a Competency to maintain himself, and latisfie the expectations of his Patron: The good man heark ned to us with much readiness; and now indeed we found our burdensmuch lighter, and our conditions not preft fo hard upon our Spirrits: Thries a week this Godly, painul Servant of Jesus Christ prayed with us, and Preach'd tous the Word of God; our meeting place was a Cellar, which I had hired at some distance from our Shop, where I stowed some Goods that were peculially my own when we fell into a greater throke of trade. To our Meetings reforted many, fometimes three or fourfcore, and though we met next the Street, yet we never had the least distutbance from the Turks, or Moors; for whilft we intermeddled not with their Superfitions, but paid our Patrons their demands, we might, without any disturbance from them, Worship our God, according to our Conferences: It's true, that fuch were the circumstances of the Slavery of many poor Christians, that they could not attend; and fuch fuch the wretched carelessness of others, that they would not attend, and such the Provisions that God had made for others, by other means, that they needed not, perhaps, attend upon God's Worship with us; but thus was our God pleased to give us the means of frengthning our Faith, and Comforting our drouping Spirits.

At length came one Captain Wildy of Ratcliff to Trade there, who, with the Affishance of the Legorn Mercahnts, free'd our Minister from his Patron. After his freedom from his Patron, yet there remained a Dmy of fixty Dollers, which was a particular charge payable to the Publick Trealury, before he could be fully enlarged from the City: We Petitioned therefore the Captain, that he might, and Mr. Sprat himself, that he would still continue to be Serviceable to our poor Souls, in the work of the Gospel, and we easily prevailed, and had the benefit of his Ministry whilst I staid there.

And. It The Eggenile of their Profiguration succious, that he multiput out his level that did notice it. One Manch in the yearthy Observe their stant, which is their Lanard indeed they Costave which did the with most home in police in the most home.

Montage Anteres in police in the missing and the most home of the history of the most his order.

Troughes, and dorsin to long a callation from my versations Professors, as to made Oblas-

29 d ıt.

l,

y

SECT. V.

Some Remarkable Observations that I gleaned up, whilft I remained in Algires.

Hey that are pressed with their own Personal Grievances, have little leisure to look abroad, and observe the Motions of others; and indeed our own Afflictions however sweetned, lay still gnawing, and grating upon our Spirits that we must needs be very ill qualified to treafure up materials to make a History. Such a Design required Leisure, Liberty, Privacy, Retiredness, Intelligence, and strict Correspondence, to all which we were perfect Strangers. Yet sometimes I could make a truce with my Troubles, and obtain so long a ceflation from my vexatious Pressures, as to make Observation.

And. 1. The Hypocrific of their Profession was so notorious, that he must put out his Eyes that did not see it. One Month in the year they Observe their Ramedam, which is their Lent; and indeed rhey Observe it by day with more Monkish Austerity, imposing upon themselves a total Abstinence: An Observation which they may be prefumed to owe to that Nestorian

Monk .

Monk, who clubb'd with Mahomet in the cursed invention of the Alchoran: But for all their demure Quadragefimal books by day, they give or fell themselves to commit with greediness all manner of the most execrable Villanies by night: And they cheat themselves with this evasion; that for footh Mahomet Commanded them to Fast so many Days, but not so many Nights; For now they beat up their Drums, and call their Friends first out of bed, then out of Doors, they provoke, challenge, dare one another to eat, drink, and run into all excess of Riot. They will neither spare Men in their Rage, nor Women in their Lust: The two hungry meals of the Day, makes the third of the Night an errand Glutton. By Day they create themselves a Purgatory, and by night the poor Slaves find a Hell. Now when they ha ve cramm'd their Guts all Night, and are Man-fick in the morning, they put on their Lenten face again; and call that a Fast, which is but Physick; and pretend Religion for that which they are compell'd to by Nature; that is, they Fast when they can eat and drink no longer: But indeed theit Fast by Day is nothing but a dry Drunkenness; for when they have drunk, and whored themselves into fin, they fancy they merit a pardon by Abhinence. A piece of Hypocrifie fo gross, that whether it be to be sampled any where in the World, unless, perhaps, by the Popish Carnevals, I cannot tell.

n

on es

nt;

re

sa

ey

an

2. Icould not but observe, that though they allow, that every man may be faved in that Religion he professes, provided he walks by its Rules,; and therefore that at last, the Jews, under the Banner of Moses; the Christians, under the Banner of Mahomer, shall all march over a fair bridg, into I know not what Paradise, a place far beyond the Elisan Fields; yet they afford no mercy to one, who having once professed, asterwards Revolis from Mahameramism; an Instance whereof I shall now present the Real der with.

The Spaniards every year return a confiderable film of mony to Algires, to be employed in the Redemption of fuch of their own Countrey as ate there in Slavery : Some fay, there is a articular Treasury let apart for that Service; but this I know, that they tile the Charitable benevolence of well disposed Persons, to advance it. Now, there was a Spanish Friar, that was a Slave, who being passed by in the Redemption that Year, took it very harnously to be neglected, thought himself much wronged; her upon he grows Difcontented, and the Devil (who never works with greater fuccels than upon that Humor) takes the Advantage to talk him on , and he in a per, Renounces the Chriflian Religion, declares himself a Muffatman. and accordingly appears in his Turkish Habit. I knew him very well by fight he was a fat, corpulent corpulent person; burafter he hadturned Renegado, I observed him to become strangely lean, and dejetted in his Countenance, but I little fufpected, that the Root of his Diftemper lay in his Conscience: but it seems he had severely reflected upon his Apoltacy, for he had nor Renounced onely his Popery, but his Christianity : His own Conscience, which was a Thousand Witnesses against him, was a Thousand Tormentors to him: Long he bore its secret and stinging lashes, but when he could no longer stand under them, he goes to the Vice-Roy's Palace, and there openly declares himself a Christian, and protells against the Superstition and Idolatry of Mahomet, as a most Execrable, and damnable Imposture: Immediatly he is conveyed before the Councel, and there strictly Examined, he perfifts refolutely in his Profession, whereupon he is clapt in Irons, and for some time there lecured: Now, they pretended this reason for their proceedure. That there had been some pra-Etifing and tampering with him, either Morally by Argument, or Naturally by some Dose of intoxicating Drugs, that had thus diftempered him; for loth they were it should be thought, that any Man of found mind, or mafter of his Reafon, would ever revolt from their Religion: But when they faw him fixt in his Refor lution, and that neither what he felt, or might fear, what they had inflicted, or could threaten, did unhinge him from his Profession, they proceeded ceeded to the last remedy, and inexorably Condemned him to the Fire : A way of Punishment which they learnt from the Spaniards themselves who first set up the Inquisition against the Moors. and have now turned the edg of it against the Protestants. And now they proceed to the Execution of the Sentence, which was performed with some Pomp, and State. And first, they formed a Crown with a Cross upon the top of it, within the Plates, and Bars whereof they put Flax; thus Crowned, they guard him through the City, out of the West-Gate, about half a mile, which was the appointed place of Execution: and first, one puts Fire to the Flax in his mock-Crown, to take possession of his Head, in the Name of the rest of his Body: at first he shook it off, but another put Fire again to it with a Cane, and then the poor man stood patiently, and presently they put Fire to the whole Pile, and there burnt him: I faw fome of his Bones, and scorched Flesh after he was dead; and the fame Evening came a Zealous Staniard, and carried away some of his scorched Flesh, and Bones, as the Holy Reliques of a Martyr, faying I have now done enough to make satisfaction for all the fins that I have committed.

29

3. It's worth Admiration, to see in what great awe they stand of the meanest Officer, who is known to be such by his Turbant, and Habit. If any Affray be made, or a murder committed in the Streets, the Chianx, or Officer presently comes without any Weapon or Perfon to affilt him; and if he seizes the Offenders, none is so hardy as to resist even unarmed Authority.

4. The great Reverence which the Moors pay to the Turks, though both Mahumetans, is remarkable: If a Moor shall dare to frike a Turk, he is punisht with great severity: I saw. two Moors whilst I was there, whole right Hands were chopt off for this one Crime, and hung about their necks in strings; the one was fet upon an Affe, the other walkt by on foot. the Common Cryer proclaiming before them their Offence, through the chief Streets of the City. I saw another also with his heels rved to a Horses Tayl; he was wholly naked, onely he had on a pair of linnen Drawers, and thus was he dragg'd through the Streets? It was a most lamentable Spectacle, to fee his Body all torn with the rugged way, and stones; the skin torn off his Back and Elbows, his Head broken, and all covered with blood, and dirt, and thus was he dragg'd through the City out at Bubazoen, or the East-gate, where he ended his milerable Life.

Two others of their own Country-men I faw Executed in a most terrible, and dreadful manner, (but either I did not know, or do not remember their Crimes:) The one was thrown off from a high Wall, and in his fall he was caught by the way, by one of the great sharp Hooks, which

Li Johan Wienningho

which were fall ned in the Wall; It caught him just under the Ribs; and there he hung roaring in implementate pain till he dyed. The other was fastned to a Ladder, his wrists, and ankles being nailed through with Iron spikes, in such a positive as somewhat resembles the Celebrated Cross of St. Andrew; and least his Flesh and Sinews should fail, and the Nails not hold; his Wrists and Ankles were bound fast with small Cords to the Ladder: Two days I saw him alive under this Torture, how much longer he lived under it I cannot tell.

They are generally great Enemies to Debanchery in publick: It's a great scandal to them When they fee any Christians, who brought that Beaftiality out of their own Countries with them, to be guilty of it. I have heard them fay, of a Drunken Slave; A Christian? No, He's a Swine. And though they will indulge themfelves by Night [especially in their Ramedam Month) yet woe be to him, that shall Offend by Day in that Kind. There was an Englishman, who had brought over with him his drunken Humour, and his Captivity had not made bin Sober: and when Religion has not firm hold of the Heart, a little matter will make fuch a one let go his hold of Religion: This English-man turn'd a Renegado, and of a Drunken Christian became a Drumben Turk, and was not able to keep the Pot from his Head , during their Holy time of Ramedam; being one day found thus like a

Of great Mercy.

Sot, he was brought into the Cassabal, or Chief Court of Judicature, where he was adjudged to receive many hundreds of violent blows; some upon his naked Back and Reins; others upon his naked Back, he could not creep from the place of punishment, but was carried away by the Hannels; his Belly, and Back were so excoriated, that Sampson Baker, an Englishman, who was his Chirurgeon, assured me he was forced to cut off abundance of his Flesh before the could be Cured.

6. What Cruckies they Exercise upon poor Slaves, needs not be mentioned, and there will be an Occasion to speak of the most Ordinary way of punishment e're long. Let it suffice, that all is Arbitrary, and unlimitted. If a Patton tha ll kill his slave, for ought I could perceive he fuffers no more for it, than if he should hill his Horfe: There was a Dutch Youth, a Slave to a Turk, who, upon some provocation, dress his Knife at his Patron; for this Offen, he was Sentenced to be dragg dout at one of the Gates! and there to have his Arms and Legs broken in pieces with the great Sledg Hammer, which Sentence was accordingly Executed, for though I could not fee his face for the Crowd, yet I heard the blows and the miserable Cries of the voor to take the free state of the blacks.

When we had walked almost so the end of on. To BZ.

SECT. VI.

The grievous Punishment Inflicted upon John Randal; the Authors Danger, and Deliverance from the same, upon pretence that they had attempted to make an Escape.

IT is time to re-assume my own concerns, and L look a little into my own Condition, which, through the good providence of God, was much better than that of many of my poor Brethren and Fellow-Captives; and yet I met with great ebbings and flowings in my Tranquility: whilft I was managing my Trade very stourly and successfully, (John Randal working with me in my Shop) my Partner now having knockt off, and left all to me: One day I changed a twenty shilling piece of Gold for Silver with a Friend, and having the mony chinking in my hand, John Randal asked me, what I did with so much mony? I defired him to keep it for me, till our return, and he should know: For he being not very well, we agreed to walk out of the Town to take the fresh Air; a liberty, which for somewhat above a mile, is indulged to the Slaves: When we had walked almost to the end of our Tedder.

33

Tedder, I was defirous to walk a little further to view the Coasts, if, perhaps, any advantage might offer it self afterwards for an Escape. though we Astually defigned no fuch thing. As we were prying about the Sea-fide, one of the Spies appointed constantly to watch, left any of the Slaves should run away, came to us, and charged us with an attempt to make an Escape? we flatly denied it, but he laid hold on us; there was no refifting; Obey we must, and accordingly attended his Mastership towards the City: Aswe drew near, I espyed some English-men at Quoits (for with fuch Recreations and Diverfions, they are willing now and then to beguile the tedious minutes of lingring thraldom) I beckoned to one of them whom I knew, and pretending only to whifper to him, I fecretly conveyed to him my purse, wherein were seven pieces of eight? we were presently met by another Spy, and those two led us to a little blind House, where they search'd us, they took away the twenty shillings, which I had put into my Friends hand, and finding nothing upon me, took away my Doublet, and then brought us before the Vice-roy, and his Council: We were ftraightly Examined, and strongly charged with an attempt to Escape: We peremptorily denyed all, and stood upon our Innocency, affirming, that onr onely defign of walking abroad, was to take the fresh Air, occasioned by my Fellows Sick-ness. This Purgation would not be Accepted, and forth, we answered, we durit not fallely accuse our selves, nor make our selves Criminal, when we were not so, and therefore if such was their will and pleasure, we must abide by it, and so we far down by the highs.

MiThe way of Punishment by the Battoon, or Conduct is this, They have a frong faff, about for Foot long, in the middle whereof are bored two holes; Into these Holes a Cord is put, and the ends of the ord fastned on the one side the stuff, with knots, so that it makes a Loop on the other fide. Into this Loop of the Cord both the Free of the Person Condemned to this Punishment are put; then two buty Fellens, one at each and of the staffilits it up in their Arms and withing the Staff about, tild his Feet are fast pined with the Good by the Ankles, they raise up his Feet with the Soles upwards, well night as high astheir foodlders, and in this potute they hold them, the poor man the mean while refling only with his Neck and Shoulders on the Ground: Then comes another lufty, furdy Knave behind him, and with a tough, fhort Truncheon gives him as many violent blows on the Soles of his Feet as the Council shall order.

But the Vice-Roy, with his Council, gathering from circumstances, and induced to believe is by our constant and resolute denial of the Fast, omitted at present any surther punishment and only commanded us to be laid in chains in the Vice-Roy's Prison till our Patrons should demand our Liberty, and fetch us out. And the next day we were both delivered, though with differing Fates; as Pharaob's Chief Butler, and Chief Baker were both taken from Prifon, the One to be Advanced, the Other to be Hanged: For John Randal's Patron being a very Termer gant alcothat abloque and unlimitred Sovereigney which they pretend to over their Slaves, and commanded him to receive three hundred blows upon the Soles of his Feet with the Battoon, in manner before described: As for my felf, when I was brought home. the Spie that leized us, came and demanded Money of my Patron for his good fervice (not reckoning that he had any thing of me) which put him into a most desperate fit of Pattion, and calling me Dog and Jem and all to naught commanded me to go markin the Looms with two other English-men that were Slaves, and Linmen-Gloth-Weavers: But alas I was a very Bungler, and understood nothing of the Craft and Mystery of Weaving more or less; but othere I wrought till I had spoiled all that I laid my Handson: Now, when he law that my labour this way would not turn to Account, he rated me for a Loggerbead, and bad me fill Quil's for the other two; being now degraded from a bungling Weaver to an excellent filler of Quilts, I continued about a month; my Shop all this while lay at fixes and feavens, what was become become of it I knew not, and dutit not for my Life discover any desire to return to that employment. At last, my Patron asked me for the money that he had lent me when I first beganto Trade I answered submissively, that I had few Goods, and till they were fold, I could not possibly repay him: He calls one of his Slaves, a Dutch man, and commands him to go with me, and turn all into ready money, and bring it him: When I came to my Old Shop, there was the Nest indeed but all the Birds were sown; for in my absence, (poor John Randal being Lame, and not able to work, my Partner sometime before having left me, and I confined to another Employment) some of these Rascals had broken open my Shop, and thence carried the best of my Goods, though my Cellar was still fafe, and some of my Goods I heard of and recovered; what money I had was hid in the Ground, as it was my constant way: That night the Dutch man and my felf returned to our Patron, and told him we could fell nothing, whereupon he remanded me to my Shop, there to Trade, paying him the two Dollars a moneth, as I had done before.

Of great Merry

SECT VII.

The Authors Patron growing poor, he is Sold, or Mortgaged to another; the wonderful kindness that he found from his second Patron.

Here was nothing yet working towards a Deleverance, nor could I yet see the least glimmering of possibility which might so much as flatter my willing mind with a hope of escaping. But it's Observed, that the Night is always darkest towards Day-break; and God is often drawing nearer to us in Mercy, when we conceive he is departing further off in Displeature.

My Patron had been sincking in his Estate a pretty while, the last Ship he had put to Sea broke his back. At last he was grown (insensitly) so low, that it could no longer be daubed up with his Repute, but he must be forced to sell all his Slaves to pay his Debts: It was not much to me whither I was chopt and changed; I might change my Goaler, and my Goal, but still I was like to be a Prisoner: I might be beight and sold, and sold again, but still my Condition was Slavery; yet one thing methonship was comfortable.

table, that the luft Instrument of my Bondage was come into Mifery as well as my fuf.

In the partage of his Slaves, it fell to my Lot and anothers to be Mortgaged for a certain sum of Money, joyntly to two Persons, the one a Cap-maker, the other a Grave Old Gentleman, who amongst his own People had the Repute or a good Natur'd and moderate Person, (as good Nature, and Moderation go at Algier.) The Day of Payment came, the Mony was not paid; the Cap-maker and the Old Gentleman feize on us, and hold us in Common, but in a While they resolved to divide us , that each of them might know his proper Goods and Chattels, and each of us might know whom to call Master, and whose whistle we were bound to Obey: We are both fummoned to appear in a certain place at mid day, and much ado there was about our Dividing : At last they agreed to Cast Lots for us, onely because I was in a handsome way of Trade, it was accorded, that he to whose share I should fall, fhould pay the other fifty Doubles, which, if I compute aright, is something more then fifty shillings Sterling. I was exceeding fearful I should fall to this Cap maker, for he had the Character of a brutish, ill-humane'd Creature and therefore I was concern'd to lift my Petition to God, that feeing, when the Lot found be caft into the lap, yet the whole Disposition thereof is of God, he would give me forth a gradious Lot ! Whatever there is of Contingency as to us there's there's nothing accidental to God. Well, God Delivered me from that Tyrant, and I was adjudged by the decision of the Lot to the Old Gentleman: And if I should be silent here, I should be the most ungrateful wretch Living: I sound not onely pity and compassion, but Love and Friendship from my New Patron? had I been his San, I could not have met with more respect, nor been treated with more tenderness: I could not wish a Friend a better Condition then I was then in, except my Bonds. If any thing could be mingled with Bondage to make it sweet? if any thing could Reconcile Slavery to Nature! if any thing could beget an Acquiescence in such a state, I did not, I could not want it.

And indeed the Freedom that I found in Servitude, the Liberty I enjoyed in my Bonds was so great that it took off much of the Edg of my desire to obtain, and almost blunted it from any vigorous artempt after Liberty, that carried hazard in it's Face; till at last I was awakened upon this Occasion.

My Patron had a fair Farm in the Countrey, about twelve miles from the City, whither he took me along with him? he had me to their Markets, shewed me the manner of them, & at my return, he loaded me home with all manner of good Provisions, that I might make merry with my Fellow Christeans? I had some Reason to conclude from his great kindness to me, that he intended to fend me thither to manage the Farm for him. I faw now evidently, that if I once quitted my shop? I should lose with it all means, all helps, and therefore all hopes to rid my felf out of this Slavery : And though I might have been there a petty Lord, and Balham'dit over the rest of my Fellow-Servants, yet Slavery had in it something of I know not what harshness that I could not brook. Fetters of Gold do not lose their Nature, they are Fetters still: Had Bajazet's Cage been of Gold, as 'twas of Iron, yet it was a Cage; and that was provocation enough to a haughty Spirit to beat out his own Brains against it's Bars. This therefore quickned my dull temper, and I began to Resolve to make an Attempt once for all. Now therefore mustering those few Wits Captivity had left me, I fet them on work, and ran through all things possible, and impossible; he that will find what he has lost, must look where 'tis not, as well as where 'is; and forming stratagems in my Head, some Idle, and Vain; some Desperate, others impossible; at last pitcht upon one, that feemed to me feizable and practicable.

E

12W

SECT

militar to manage the family for him

the grand the week wo were the the

SECT. VIII.

The Contrivance for our Escape, the Persons Acquainted with it, and also those that were Engaged in it; some Debates about leaving my Patron.

Aving Formed the Delign, or at least, the Having Format and general Model of it, my first care was to open it to some skilful and faithful Counsellers, who might more impartially discover to me it's inconveniences, where it was like to prove leaky, or take wind; And first I acquainted Mr. Sprat, our Minister, with it, and laid before him the whole of the Contrivance; and he so far approved it, that he judged it possible: Next, I acquainted one Robert Lake, a very wife and Religious Perfon, who bestowed his Blessings on it, and with'd it all good Success: And lastly, I acquainted my Friend John Randal, who approved it: Yet none of these could, or would run the risque of it's miscarriage. Mr. Sprat was already delivered from his Patron, and in a fair way to be absolutely enlarged, in a more safe and Regular way, for not long after our Escape came Captain Pack, of London, and paid the fixty Dollars and took him along with him for England: John Randal had a Wife, and Child and these were too dear pledges to be 'lest behind, and yet too tender things to undergo our Difficulties: Robert Lake was an Ancient Person, and neither able passively to be carried in, nor attively to carry on a Design that required much hardness of Body and Mind to endure, and much strength to go through with it? we had nothing more from them then Prayers and Counsels, which yet was the mane? and then my next care was, to take in Partners, and Accomplices in the Design

And herein I had a three fold Respect: First to such as were necessarily required to Form the Instrument of our Escape and Deliverance: Secondly, to such, whose tryed, and approved Fidelity I might presume would be obstinately, and Religiously secret in concealing it: Thirdly, to such, whose Courage of Mind, and strength of Body would render them capable to pursue the ends of it, to put it in Execution, and go through with it .

But before I would reveal the Project to any of them in particular, I Required an Oath of Secresie: That whereas I should now reveal to him, or them, a matter of great concernment to their Happiness and Well-fare, they should solemnly promise, and swear, that in case they did not approve it, or would not joyn in it, yet they should, neither directly, ner indirectly,; for sear, or slattery, discover it, or the Persons engaged in it, to any Person we atsoever. When a Project was once mentioned, which promised in general their Happiness and Well-fare, I needed not tell them in particular what it drove at, they could finell out that with eafe; for what could be Good, or Happy to Slaves without Liberty? This Oath therefore they willingly took : I judged feven Persons would be enough to manage, carry on, and Execute it; and therefore except the three fore-mentioned, I communicated it to no one Person but these following, who engaged in it, though all of them did not go through with it. John Anthony, a Carpenter, who had been a Slave fifteen years: his Trade fufficiently shews, how useful he would prove in the Defign. William Adams, who fince his Captivity, had learnt and used the Trade of a Bricklayer; his Serviceableness in it will be evident in the fequel; he had been a Slave eleven Years. John Jephs, who was a Sea-man, and must therefore be presumed one of the Quorum is a Project of this Nature; he had endured Slavery about five Years. John----a Carpenter, who was a skilful Man in his Trade, Lufty of Body, and therefore must be a good Wheel in this Engine, and he had been a Slave five Years: And two others, whose Employment it was to-wash small Cloaths at the Seafide, and those had also their parts in carrying on the work, though they went not along with us; and William Okcley, who presents the Reader with this Narrative, who was taken August 11: 1639, and Escaped June 30. 1644 these made up the Number of 7. There arose a Scruple, nay, it amounted to a Question, whether to attempt an Escape from my Patron, one that so dearly Loved me, so courteously treated me, had so fairly bought me, were justifiable before God and Men?

And 1. It might be a Question in point of Prudence; for, where could I hope to mendiny felf? Or better my Condition? I might possibly find worse Quarter in England, where the Civil Wars were now broke out, and to that height of exasperation, that those of the same Nation, and, perhaps Blood, would hardly give Quarter of Life one to another; If the Name of Native Countrey bewitcht me, if That dazled my Eyes; furely u here-ever we are well is our Countrey, and all the World is Home to him that thrives all over the World: And why should the Name of Bondage, why should a word grate so harshly upon my delicate Spirit, when the sting of it was taken away? Liberty is a good word; but a Man cannot buy a Meals meat with a word: And Slavery is a hard word, but it breaks no mans back. Thousands are more Slaves then I, who are yet their own Masters, and less at Liberty then my ielf, who have the free rake and range of the whole World. yet my Patron's Favour was no free bold; I held not my Happy time in fee simple, all was advolunlunt atem Domini; besides, he might dye, and leave me to another; or Live to Sell me to another, who might be of another Character, and then my Condition would be therefore wose because I had known a better.

2. I might be Onestioned in point of Ingenuity, how I could be fo unworthy to leave him, who had Loved me? Would not all that should hear of it, Condemn me of ill Nature, to leave without taking leave, one that had been a Father to me, who might have used the Right of a Lord; and used me as a Child, who might have treated me as a Slave? But, really I thought there was more of Manners and Courtship in the Objection, than of weight, and Corency; Still I dwelt with Meshech, and had my Habitation among ft the Tents of Kedar; and one thought of England, and of its Liberty and Gofpel confuted a thousand such Objections, and routed whole Legions of these little Scruples. It was no time to stand upon the Punttilio's of Honour and Ingenuity; no time to Complement, and frain courtese; here was no Farewel Parron, in the Case, and therefore I soon overcame that.

But, 3. It might be Questioned in the Court of Conscience, whether it were not down-right These to with-draw my self from his Service, who had bought me, paid for me, enter'd upon me, possess and enjoy'd me, as his own proper Goods, and now I was not my own, had no right to my self; Whether might not a Man be

d

If

f

·c d,

re

5 ,

ne

ut

0-

felo de se, in stealing bimself, as well as killing bimself? And whether he is not the greater self-robber, that steals away himself, then he that steals away from himself? But I much questioned their propriety to me; my Patron's Title was rotten at the Foundation: Man is too noble a Creature to be made subject to a deed of bargain and Sale; and my consent was never ask'd to all their bargains, which is Essential, to create a right of Dominion over a Rational Creature, where he was not born a Subject. If I had forseited my Life or Liberty, the Law might take it; but I was not Conscious to my self of any such forfeiture, but that I was at my own Disposal.

Thus all was clear and quiet, and we went on with our Defign, which I now first opened to them: That I had contrived the Model of a Boat, which being formed in parcels, and afterwards put together, might, by the super-intendency of Divine Providence, prove an Ark to deliver us out of the hands of our Enemies. This was foon said, and greedily entertained; to Escape was a pleasant word, the Name of Liberty made Musick in our Ears, and our wishing hearts danced to the Tune of it; and a Boat was as promising a means as any thing could be imagined: But when once their thoughts cooled, and came more sedately to look into the difficulties of it; they appeared innumerable, and some of them feemed insuperable; and some things that had past

H

a li

N

2

R

a de

li

W

A

ft

h

B

ri

pi

on

·V

W

past current in my own thoughts, and I went clever away with them, without any rub; vet when they came to be pierced into with more Eyes, and scann'd upon more Fingers, they were attended with confiderable impediments: where this Boat should be built, was one staggering Question: Where it should be Lanched, and where put to Sea, was a Choaking Objection: How we should escape those Argus-eyes, which are always observing us by Day, was a gravelling Qhæry; or how to get out of the City by Night, whose Walls are so high, whose Gates are so close shut, and strongly Guarded was another vexations Quary: How we should be Rigged and Victualled for fuch a Voyage, was a confiderable enquiry: and whether we should design, was not to be slighted. But how such a little Skiff, rather than Boat, should be able to Weather all the Accidents of the Sea, was a Neck Question, enough to strangle Faith, and Stifle with us with Despair.

n

a

S

5

e

To these Objections, I Answered. That I had designed my own Cellar, as the meetest place wherein to build the Boat; that when it was there Built, it might be taken in pieces again, and carried out of the City in parcels, and bestowed in private places till things were ripe for Execution. That for a place where to put to Sea, it would be time enough to determine upon that when we had sinish'd our Vessel: That Mayork was the most commodious place to design to et omale ensomment

Land in: But in general I told them to this pura pose; That if we never attempted any thing till we had Answered all Objections, we must fit with our Fingers in our Mouths all our days, and pine, and languish out our tedious Lives in Bondage, Let us be up and doing, and God would be with us. To begin is one half of our work; Let us make an Eslay, and Answer particular Objections as they Offer'd themselves, and as we met with them in our work. That the Project had its difficulties, was confessed; but what has not, that is Commendable, and Glorious? Yet whatever difficulties & dangers we could meet with, Liberty, kept in our Eye, would fweeten. the dangers we might encounter in Attempting, They were all well fati: fied with what was faid' and all engaged to venture the utmost they were, and had, to accomplish it.

SECT.

W pi w ti

H

h

-

d

t

SECT. IX.

The Model of the Boat, Carrying it out of the City, and bestowing it in convenient Places.

IN the Cellar where we had Worship'd God, we began our Work; and it was not the Heliness, but the Privacy of the place that invited us, and advised us to it. And first, we provided a piece of Timber about twelve Foot long, to make the Keel: But because it was impossible to convey a piece of Timber of that length out of the City, but it must be seen; and of that shape, but it must be suspected, and that Suspition would bring us into Examination, and the Rack, or Battoon might extert a Confession out of the most resolved, and obstinate breast; we therefore cut it in two pieces, and fitted it for Joynting thus in the middle. Our next care was the Timbers of Ribs of the Poat, which we contrived thus; every one of the Timbers was made of three pieces, and joynted in two places, because a whole Rib at its full length, would be lyable to the fame inconveniences with the Keel. Now understand, that the joynts of the Ribs were not made with Mortice and ie-non, but the flat side of one of the three Pieces was laid over the other, and two holes were bored at every joynt, into which two Nails were to be put, when we should joyn the parcels of our Boat together: You must understand further, that these two holes at every joynt were not made in a strait line, parallel with the sides of the pieces, for then the three pieces, which make one Rib, being joyned together would have made one strait piece; a Form which would by no means comport with the Use and Design of the Timbers; But fo, that when both the Nails were in the holes, each Joynt would make an obtufe angle, and so incline so near towards a Semi-Circu lar Figure, as our Occasion required. All this while here is no visible Provision made for boards, to cloath the naked Ribs of our Boat, without which, the Keel and Timbers looked but like an vieles Anatomy; but neither had we, nor was it possible we should have any boards in our Vessel: Necessity is the best Artificer when all is done, if we accept her Sifter Contingency; to which two the World has been beholden for the most useful inventions, which at this day do ease the Labour and Toyl of wearied Mankind. For the Joynting of these Boards; and the Nailing of them, to make the Boat Water-tite, would require such Hammering, and that Hammering would make fuch a tlamarow Echo in the Cellar, as must have drawn upon us the Jealous Eyes of the Algerines. who about

7

6

n

a t

t

W

W

C

mir

w th

A bi ni

m

th

about their Wives and Slaves are insupportably [uspicious: And therefore from the first Conception of the Defign, I always refolved upon a Canvas: In pursuance of which thought, being all fatisfied that it was practicable; we bought as much strong Canvas as would cover our Boat twice over, upon the Convex of the Carine : We provided also as much Pitch, Tar, and Tallow as would ferve to make it a kind of a Tawparlin Sear-cloth, to swaddle the naked body of our Infant-Boat : With Earthen pots to melt done our Materials in; and prefixt a night wherein we might Execute that part of our Labour. The two Carpenters, and my felf were appointed to this Service, and the Cellar was the place where we met. Matters had hitherto run very evenly, and smoothly, but here we met with some discouraging rubs. For when we had stopt all the Chinks and Crannies of the Cellar, that the streame of the melted Materials might not creep out and betray us, (there being no Chimney,) we had not been long at our work before I felt my felf exceeding fick, with the itrong, and unufual fcent of the melted Liquor; I was forced to go out into the streets to gass for breath, where meeting with the cool Air, it over-came me, I swooned, fell down brake my face, and there lay: My Companions missing me, made out to seek me, found me in this fad plight, and carried me in again, though exceeding fick, and unferviceable. They

143

0-

re

ur

r,

le

S

b

ne

ns

n-

in

n-

is or

t, ed

ad

1-er

en

a-

S, id

111

n

10

Mt

had not proceeded much further before I heard one of them complain he was fick, and cou'd proceed no further, and now our work frood Itill: I plainly faw that our hopeful Project, that had hitherto fo smoothly proceeded, must needs miscarry, and Prove Abortive; for it would be impossible to finish it this night: and if we once partid, and suffered our Spirits to tool over the Design, they would never cease cooling till they were stone cold, and hard frezen; and therefore I advised to set open the Door, and commit our selves, and our work to Gods Protection: For I told them they could not but know, that if any Discovery were made, the burden would fall beaviest upon my shoulders; and my Back or Feet must pay for all. At length, we resolved to set the Cellar-door wide open, and as foon as that was done, and the stream pretty well gone out, we came to our felves again, couragiously went on with our business, and pitched one half that Night. The next night we met again, fet open the Door, and whilft they plyed the work, I stood Sentinel at the Door to give Notice of approaching danger; but we happily finish'd the whole, and while it was yet dark, carried it to my Shop, which was about a Farlong from the Cellar, and there at present secured if.

I shall not question the Readers ingenuity so much, but that he will suppose there goes a great deal more to a Boat than I have described;

but 55

but what should I trouble him with those things that are common to all other Boats, I mention only what was Peculiar to our own; and I do not intend to trouble him with the Boat-wright's Lesture.

In our Cellar we fitted all things, we made the Timbers fit to the Keel, and the Canvas fit for the Timbers, and the Seats fit to the whole, and then took all in pieces again, and laying our Heads together, plotting how to convey all out of the Town, and lodg them in secure and trufty places.

And first for our Keel, we all with unanimous consent judged Will. Adams the fittest Person to execute that part of the Design, for he had long Exercised the Trade of a Brick-layer, and his Employment lay much without the Town; and belides, he used such pieces in levelling his work. He therefore, accourted with his Apron before him, his Trowel in his hand, and one of the pieces upon his shoulder, undertook it, and without the least Observation went cleverly away with it, and as he faw his Opportunity, hid it in the bottom of a Hedg; and not long after conveyed out its Fellow, and Lodged it in the same place. This succeeding so happily, we faw no great difficulty in the Timbers. for we put one nail into a hole of every joym, and then you will eafily conceive, that the two extream pieces of one Rib being folded inwards n on the middlemost, will lye in the room of one of the pieces for length, excepting that little that the ends of each piece were beyond the holes: Now, by general confent, the conveying thele out of the City was committed to one, whose Employment was to wash small Clothes by the Sea lide: He pursthern into his bag amongst his Clothes, and so very orderly carried them out, and hid them where he could find most commoditure storage, but yet with Respect to nearness to that Place where the Keel was daid.

But how to convey our Tarpawlin lafe out of Town feemed most difficult; by night it was impossible, and by day the difficulties very confiderable, and the danger proportionable, for the Governare firstly watch'd, the Streets crowded, the Spies pickering In overy corner, and the bulk of the Comus thus drefled was very great. To divide it had been to ruin our febes, for no finching together again, could so chem the fearching water, but it would find out the needlelieler. At last we ventured upon this way; we put it into a large Sack and committed it to him that nied to wall Clothes, and left any should dapajealoushand upon it, weputa Pillow over bur Canvas within the bag, that fo its formers might delude the Inquilitor, and make it pass for Glothes. Let none dispise, or conderny these as low, mean pieces of contrivance, for we had not Politicians tools to work withal, but the less was mer. Policy, the more glorious does the wifthat that little Policy we were guilty of was of his beforing allo; what of fin was in all of it, was ensurely our own; what of Powers, Wildom; and Success, was all his: But our Agent escaped happily with it, and Lodging it in a secret place. returned.

We had yet many things to provide and Ours are absolutely necessary, they were of the Quorum to an Escape by sea: As Finns are the Fishes Oars, so Oars are the Boats Finns, by help whereof the makes her way: Now, to Supply this defect, we took two Pipe-flaves, and flitting them a cross from corner to corner with a Hand-faw, we made of each Pipe-staff two Rude things, which Necessity was pleased to entitle The blades for a pair of Ours, and these were eafily conveyed out, without suspition.

Next, we considered, that Provision must be laid in for our Voyage; and therefore we provided a small, and but a small quantity of Bread. prefuming our flay at Sea must be but short; for either we should speedily recover Land, or speedily be drown'd, or speedily be brought back again: Two Goats Ikins also, Stript off whole, and fo Tann'd (akind of Bottle much used by the Algerines to carry Milk and Water in) we had, which me lived with fresh water, and we know that must needs be a great Rarity in the Mediterranean.

We remembred also that a Sail might be of right good we to us for expedition, and therefore fore we bought as much Canous as would Anfwer that End; and when some Dispute was made about carrying it out, I Offered to undertake that last part of our work. I had not gone a quarter of a Mile, but as I call my wary eye back, I espyed the same spie, who once before had leized me, and given me trouble, following me very roundly. My Heart began to ake; I was loth a Defign of so near, and dear con-cernment to all of us, should be brought to the Birth, and there should be no strength to bring forth. It's fad, after a Voyage, to ship-wrack in the Haven, but me-thought it was more fad to fink a Veffel before it could be Launched: And here I first found the difference between Innocence and Guilt; for how boldly could I hold up my head to this Spie, and his betters, (at least, his Mafters) when I was not Conscious of any fuch Defign in hand? Where as now the Reflection of my Conscience. was enough to write guilt in my Countenance, (for some things are fin there which are not lo in other places:) and this had betray'd me, had I not fuddenly pluckt up my spirits, and spying an English-man washing Clothes by the Sea, I went the ready way to him, and defired him to help me wash that Canvas; as we were washing it, the learing Spye came and flood upon the Rock just over our Heads to watch our motions: As foon as we had a little formally wash'd it, to cast a Mist before his Observing Eyes, I took the Canvas and spred

it before his Face upon the top of the Rock to dry; he staid his own Time, and then march'd off. But I was as Jealous of him, as he could be of me for his Heart; and therefore searing he might lye in Ambush for me, took it when twas dry, and very fairly carried it back into the City, and faithfully acquainted my Accomplices how the Matter squared. This Discoraged them not a little, for that they seemed timorous to proceed in the Enterprize.

At last we comforted, and encouraged one another, and entred into close Counsel, where we should meet that Night? At what time? Where we should put our Boat together, and where put to Sea? The Time was an hour within Night; the Rendevouz on a Hill, about half a Mile from the Sea; and so we dispersed, some one way, some another; and privily lurking in Hedges and Ditches, lay close till the time appointed.

r

There is one thing that the Reader will be ready to ask; and I shall be more ready to Anfiner him for a special Reason: viz. What I did with my Shop and Goods? When I had once Resolved upon this Adventure, and saw it go on hopefully, I gave my Patron my wonted Visits; kept sair Correspondence, paid him his demands duly, but secretly I made off my Goods as sast as I could, and turn'd all into ready Money: I had a Trunk, for which John Anthony made me a false bottom; into which I put what Silver or F 2 Gold

Gold I had? and into the Body of the Trunk, what ever it would hold, and was worthy holding. This Trunk I committed privately to the Fide-lity of our dear Minister, Mr. Sprat; he took the charge of it, and he was now ready to receive his full Dilcharge. This Trunk he Faithfully Secured, and carefully brought over, and as homestly delivered to me when he heard I was come safe to London; and I was willing to move that Question, merely for the Answers sake, which withestes his Fidelity.

another, and entred into choic Council, where we frould meet that Night: At what there? Where I where Where we frould the our load together, and where put to Sea? The a intervals an hour within Night: the Rendevouz on a Hill short half a Mile from the Sea; and fo we differried, force of the average of the chief short force of the average and bright intervals in their especiated.

Toward Reader will be rove ready to Anticador to be seady to Anticador to sole; and if all be rove ready to Anticador thin for a special Readon: vic. What I did with my Shop and Goods When I had once Resolved aponthis Adventure, and saw it goon

Reptair Correspondence, paid him his demands duly, but secretly I made of my Goods as fast as Leould, and turn'd althino ready Money: I had a Truck; for which fish Anthony made me a false section; into which I put what Silver or Gold

Hill; premiting our leves much Advanta from the Seath Xm: TiDE of mont

we all altered our Rehalution aux

The putting off our Boat together, the Difficulties we met with therein; and our putting out to Sea, June 30. 1644.

vineense A S foon as we were med all together at the A appointed place; we began to think of Executing our long intended Dufigne but we were divided in our Countels, where to begin our work: It had been a Queltion propounded before, and we rheaght we had fully resolved upon the place; but acour Mouning we were frangely discompased: There were two places which food in Competition, each pretending good Conveniences for that end. The one was a Hilly about halfa Mile from the Sea; the other was a Walley, encompassed with two Hedges, about a Furlong from the Hill, but of the fame distance with it from the Sea: It was irged for the Valley, that it was a place of more Secrecy and Briviacy, tels obvious to views but then it was objected, that we might there be supprized, and feized by the Chirches obour Enemies, e're we could have notice to shift for our selves : For the Hill, it had been argued, that we might there make benen Discovery of Danger, and make Provision to aboyd it, and in thory we all agreed over over night, to put our Boat together upon the Hill; promising our selves much Advantage from its Scituation: But when we were met, we all altered our Resolution without any visible Reason, and carried it for the Valley. God is much in the dark to us, but all our wayes are in the open Light to him. It's very difficult to give an Account what God is doing at present, but we shall know, if we can but patiently wait till future Providences Comment upon the former: And in a while we saw the Reason why God over-ruled our purposes.

We had hid feveral of our Materials near the top of the Hill, where also grew a small Fig-tree, which we had marked with our Eye, as Judging it would be useful to strengthen the Keel of our Boat: Two of our Company were immediately dispatcht to faw down this Fig-Tree, and bring it, and the parcels of our Boat there disposited away with them: They were hardly come to the place, but we heard Dogs bark about the top of the Hill, and indeed two Men with Dogs came very near them; but our Men being aware lay close and still, and so they passed by without making any Discovery, and then our Men bestirr'd themselves, and brought away the Fig-Tree, and the other Materials, and returned to us.

And now we had once more brought the scatter'd Limbs of our Boat into one place, which, like those of Absyrtus, had been dispersed up and

Of great Mercy.

and down the Fields: It was no time to trifle, & therefore we all buckled to our work in good earnest: But we were so nigh some that were at work in the Neighbouring Gardens, that we could hear them speak, and therefore must needs suppose they might hear us too; and therefore we Acted by Signs, and pointed, and pulled, and nodded, but were all Mutes: It might have been an Expedient for the Builders of Babel, when their Languages were Divided, to have carried on their great Project by Signs: but certainly there was Consusting poured out upon their Hearts and Counsels, as well as Division in their Tongues and Languages.

n

c

The two parts of our Keel we foon joyned; then opening the Timbers, which had already one Nail in every Joynt, we groped out for the other hole; and put its Nail into it: Then we open'd them at their full length, and applyed them to the top of the Keel, fastning them with Rope-Tarn, and small Cords; and so we served all the Joynts to keep them firm and frable; then we bound small Canes all along the Ribs lengthways, both to keep the Ribs from vering, and also to bear out the Canvas very stiff against the pressing water: Then we made Notches upon the ends of the Ribs, or Timbers, wherein the Our smight plye; and having tyed down the Seats, and strengthned our Keel with the Fig-Tree, we lastly drew on our double Canvas Case, already fitted; and really the Canvas feemed a Windingheet

theet for our Boat; and our Boat a Coffin for

This done, four of our Company took it upon their shoulders, and carried it down towards the Sea, which was about half a Mile off: It was a little Representation of a Funeral, to see the four Barers Marching in deep filence with something very like a Herfe, and Coffin, upon their shoulders, and the rest of us decembly attending the Ceremony; but we wanted Torches, and befides, it's not usual for anyto wait upon their own Coffins: But we durft not grudg our Boat that small, and last Office, to carry it half a Mile, for we expected, it should repay us that Serrice and Civilty with Interest, in carrying us runy a League: We carried it at Land, where it could not frim; that it might carry us at Sea, where we could not walk. As we went along, they that were in the Gardens heard us patting by, and called to us, who comes there? But it was dark, and we had no mind to prate, and therefore without any Answer, we filently held on our way.

When we came to the Sea-fide, we immediately first our felves naked, and putting our Clothesinto the Boat, carried it, and them, as far into the Sea as we could wade; and this we did, left our tender Boat should be toren against the Stones or Rocks; and then all seven of us got into her: But here we soon sound how our Skill in Calculating the Lading of our Vessel.

failed

Of great Mercy

but the was ready to fink under us, the water coming in over the fides? To that once again we must entertain new Countels, at last, one whose Heart most failed birry was willing to be fint out, and rather hazard the uncertain Torment of the Land, than certainly be drowed at Seas then we made a second experiment, but fail the was so deep Laden, that we all concluded there was no venturing out to Sea: At length, another went a shore, and then she held up her Head very stoutly, and seem'd hearty enough for our Voyage.

It was time now to commit, and Commend our felves, and Veffel to the Protection, and Conduct of that God who Rules the Winds and the waves, and whose Kingdom is in the deep Waters, imploring Mercy for the Pardon of our Sins, and resigning up our souls to God, as if we had been presently to suffer Death by the Hand of the Executioner. and taking our Solemn Farewel of our two Companions. whom we left behind, and wishing them as much Happiness as could be hoped for in Slavery, and they to us as long a Life as could be expected by Men going to their Graves; we Launched out, upon the thirtieth day of June, in the Year of our Lord, One Thousand, Six Hundred, Forty, and Four: A Night for ever to be remembred

A Small Monument

94

theet for our Boat; and our Boat a Coffin for

This done, four of our Company took it upon their shoulders, and carried it down towards the Sea, which was about half a Mile off: It was a little Representation of a Funeral, to see the four Barers Marching indeep filence with something very like a Herfe, and Coffin, upon their shoulders, and the rest of us decembly attending the Ceremony; but we wanted Torches, and befides, it's not usual for any to wait upon their own Coffins: But we durft not grudg our Boat that fmall, and last Office, to carry it half a Mile, for we expected, it should repay us that Service and Civilty with Interest, in carrying us many a League: We carried it at Land, where it could not frim; that it might carry us at Sea, where we could not walk. As we went along, they that were in the Gardens heard us passing by, and called to us, who comes there? But it was dark, and we had no mind to prate, and therefore without any Answer, we filently held on our way.

When we came to the Sea-fide, we immediately stript our selves naked, and putting our Clothesinto the Boat, carried it, and them, as far into the Sea as we could wade; and this we did, lest our tender Boat should be toren against the Stones or Rocks; and then all seven of us got into her: But here we soon found how our Skill in Calculating the Lading of our Vessel

failed

Of great Mercy.

but the was ready to fink under us, the water coming in over the fides. To that once again we must entertain new Countels, at last, one whole Heart most failed blury was willing to be first out, and rather hazard the uncertain Torment of the Land, than vertainly be drown if it Sea, then we made a fecond Experiment, but still the was so deep Laden, that we all concluded there was no venturing out to Sea: At length, another went a shore, and then she held up her Head very stoutly, and seem'd hearty enough for our Voyage.

It was time now to commit, and Commend our felves, and Vessel to the Protection, and Conduct of that God who Rules the Winds and the waves, and whose Kingdom is in the deep Waters, imploring Mercy for the Pardon of our Sins, and resigning up our souls to God, as if we had been presently to suffer Death by the Hand of the Executioner. and taking our Solemn Farewel of our two Companions. whom we left behind, and wishing them as much Hapriness as could be hoped for in Slavery, and they to us as long a Life as could be expected by Men going to their Graves; we Launched out, upon the thirtieth day of June, in the Year of our Lord, One Thousand, Six Hundred, Forty, and Four: A Night for ever to be remembred

A Januar Ivlommons

membred by his poor Creatures, who are our selves Great Monuments of Divine Providence, and do set up this Littile Monument of his Goodness and Mercy, that may furvive us and bear up the Name of God to after-times, that by us Men may Learn to Put their Trust in God: And the Bill of Lading is as followeth; John Anthony, William Adams, John Jephs, John-Carpenter, and William Okley.

Little Cotto

SECT whom we left behind, and will ing

tieth duy of fanc, in Pouton Se Fundad and Loui: A Might for ever to

Cur the

SECT. XI.

The great Extremities we Endured at Sea for Six Dayes, and Nights, with the Co-incident Providences of God that appeared for us in our Extremities, and our Miraculous Landing at Mayork, July 6. 1644.

TE are now out at Sea without Helm, or V Pilot; without Anchor, Tackle, or Compais; but God was thefe. all thefe; and more then all thefe. Our Number was Small, our Work was Great, we could not afford one Idle Hand, not one idle Finger: Four of the Company continually wrought at the Oars; and indeed we wrought for our Lives, and then I shall not need to fay how we wrought: But this Ishall say, I can truly say it, I never saw strength so strained, nor the utmost of what Nature could do for Life and Liberty, exerted fo much in all my Life. The Employment of the fifth Man was more easie, bur no less necessary, which was to free the Boat of that water, which by Degrees leak't through our Canyas.

We Labour'd the harder that Night, because we would gladly be out of the Ken of our Old Masters by Day; but when Day appear'd, we were yet within sight of the Ships that lay in the Haven, and Road, and off the Land: But our Boat being small, and lying close, and snug upon the Sea, either was not at all discovered, or else seemed something that was not worth the taking up: A little hope in the midst of great Fears, made us double, and re-double our Diligence; we tugg'd at the Oars like those who are Chain'd to the Gallies, because we had no mind to be Slaves to our Old Patrones in their Gallies.

But upon all Occasions we found our want of fore-caff, for now our Broad, which was to be the staff of our decayed strength, had lie loaking in the Sale water, like a dranken Toalt fopt in Brine, and was quite spoiled: And our fresh water in the Bottles stank of the Tann'd Skins, and Owze, having lye fobbing in the Salt water which made it nauceous: But yet that hopethat hoverd over us, and flatter'd us that we should one day mend our Commons, sweeten'd all a gain; fo long as Bread was Bread, we complained not: Three days with good Husbandry it lasted, but then pale Famine (which is the worst sheap Death can be painted in) stared us in the Face; And there was no substitute for Bread at Sea: At Land, the Roots of Grassthe tops of Trees, and the vilest Excrements have ferved to stop the clamour of a Ravenous Stomach, but that which Slaves despised, we thould have have admired, and prized: Water indeed we might have, either cold, or bot; we had choice, but it was a hard choice: Either the cold fatt meter out of the Sea, or that warmer which had been strained through our Bodies, and that we chole of the two, but we must not have that, after a while, unless we would first accept the other: And the Misery was, these did not affrage our thirst, but increase it; nor increase our frength, but diminish it; yet these were the means of Life: Strange means, that would destroy the End.

d

1

V

C

15

r

C

d d

VC

Several things added to our Misery; for trouble seldom comes solitary : For first, we had the Wind for some time full against us: And this was bothan evil in its felf, an evil in its effett, and an evil in its cause. It was a great evil in it self; it increased our Labour, and then defeated it: We Rowed barder to less purpose: we moved, but did not advance! we f, ent our strength for nought, and in vain. It was an evil in its effect; for it engaged the Waters against us, and drew them into its prey, The Sea is a perfect Neuter of it felf, and willing to maintain its Neutrality; but the powerful Winds drew her into the Faction: And that Sea which serves the North to day, shall comply with the more prevailing South to Morrow; for the Waves are the greatest time-servers in the World: But it was far the greatest evil in its Cause; for the Winds being against us, argued that God was against against us; for the Wind we know was his: He brings the Winds out of his Magazines. We were now so dispirited, that we debated, whether we should bare up with the Wind, or make the best of our way, and Row against it? That is, whether it were not better to go back to AL gires with ease, then painfully make towards Freedom? At last like Persons that though we knew not what to do, yet resolved not to return; we resolved whilst we had Life, and strength, and Breath, we would struggle with it: And now the great God interpoled; he rebuked his Wind; it was not against us; nay he reconciled his Wind, and it became our Friend. He that can turn the Rivers in the South, could turn the Winds out of the North : Here we might have had a notable demonstration of Gods Soverignty. He determined the Quarter of the Wind, the Quantity of the Wind, and the Continuance of the Wind. The Quarter, whence it should blow The; Quantity, how much it should blow, and the Continuance, how long it should blow. The Quarter was our Enemy, the Continuance had quite brought us to Despair; but had he opened his Hand, and let out one blast more, the proud Waters had gone over our Souls, we had perished in the deep : But we see that our times are in Gods Hand; the Ocean in the hollow of the fine Hand, and the Winds in the fame hand; and Happy it was for us, that we, and they, were all there.

A Second great Inconveniency was, that our Labour was without Intermission, though we advanced not forwards at many stroaks, yet cestation had driven us backwards. The poor Sentinel that stands upon the Watch, yet comforts himself that another will Relive him; but we had none to take the toyl off our Hands, and give us Respite: We might shift our places, but not our pains.

A Third great Evil that lay fore upon us, was the extremity of the heat by day; the Season was Raging hot, being the beginning of July; the Climent was hot, being under, or about the Fourth Climate; we wanted fresh Water to cool the Heat, and were engaged in continual Labour to enrage the heat, and all these made it insupportable to our Bodies, and our little, or no hope, (which now like a Candle burnt down to the Socket, did rather blink, than burn) made it grievous to our Souls. One small help we had (if it was a help) that the fifth Man, who emptyed the Boat of the Salt Water, threw it upon the Bodies of the rest to cool them; But this was a Miserable Remedy, for our Bodies were so bleached between the scorching Sun, and the cooling Water, that they rose up in Blisters all over. Great pain we felt, great danger we were in, great Mileries were endured, great wants we were under, and had nothing little, but hope, food, and strength. By Day we were all stark Naked, by Night we had our Shirts, or loofe Coats, and that was all our Cloathing, the rest

we left a shore to ease our Boat.

If any shall be so Inquisitive, as to ask, by what Directions we treated our Course, that we did not tack about insensibly in the dark Night or Day? He may know, that for the Day, one of the Company had a Pocket-Dyal, which supplyed the place of the Compass, ee'n well enough for such a Vessel, and such Mariners. By Night when the Stars appeared, we had our advice from them, and when they dis appeared, we ghessed at our way by the Motions of the Clouds.

In this sad & woeful plight we continued sour Dayes and Nights; on the fifth Day, we were on the brink of the brink of despair, and all hope that we should be saved, utterly perished. And now, as persons despairing of the End, we ceased to pursue the means; laid by our Oars, left off our Labour; either we had no strength left, or were loth to throw away that little we had to no purpose, only we kept still emptying the Boat; loth to drown, loth to dye, yet knew no wayes to avoyd Death: When the End is removed, all means perish with it.

They that act least, commonly wish the most: thus when we had lest fruitless Labour, we sell upon fruitless wishes, that we might meet with some Vessel, some Ship to take us ups If it was but a Ship, we considered no furthers. English, or African, Tross, Tyrinsue; all was a

Cale

Case: Or if not, yet the worst was better than our bad case; and therefore resolved, could we have Discovered any Ship, to have made towards her, though it had been one of Algiers: How many wisht themselves again in Egyst, when they Combated with the un-expected Difficulties of the Wilderness! How of have the People of God been more atraid of the means of their Deliverance, than of their Danger! When Christ came to laye his Disciples from the Storm, yet because he came in a way uncouth, and unexpected, they cryed out for fear, Mat. 14. 26. Whether the Reader will pity, or condemn us, I know not; but to that pass were we now brought, that we would have accepted Life. upon any terms, not base and sinful; and whether we should have stuck at such or no, I have no such fecurity from my own Heart as to resolve him.

Whilst we were at this dead Ebbe of Hope, the Great God, whose most Glorious Opportunity to help, is his Creatures greatest Extremity: He that appeared for Abraham in the Mount, and to the three Young Men in the Fiery Furnace; he that Delivered Israel at the Sea, at the Red Sea; he who times all his Mercies for their Advantage: even He sent us some Relief, and a little Rebest is great, in great exigencies. As we lay hulling up and down, we Discovered a Torroise not far from us assert in the Sea. Had the great Drake. Discovered the Spanish Plate-Fleet, he could not have more Rejoyced; once again we bethought our felves of our Oars; and now our little Boat shewed it felf to be of the right breed of Algiers, made of Piratick Timber, and to its poor Abbility would become a Corfair; we filently Rowed to our Prey, took it into the Boat with great Triumph, we cut off her Head, and let her bleed into a Pot; we drank the Blood, eat the Liver, and suck'd the Flesh; warm Flesh, and hot Liquor (except our own) had been a great Rarity with usalong time, it was a Novelty of Providence; and really it wonderfully refresh'd our Spirits, repaired our decayed strength and recruited Nature; at least, poor exhausted Nature was willing to be cheated, and fancy her self recruited: But there was no cheat in't we were really refresh'd, and with fresh vigour and courage fell to our Work; we left our fears behind us, we pickt up some scatter'd crumbs of hope, and about Noon, we Discovered, or thought we Discovered Land. It's impossible to express the Joy, and Triumph of our railed Souls at this apprehension. The Poets tell us, that as often as Hercules threw the great Giant against the Earth, his Mother Earth gave him new frength against the next Encounter: It was new frength, new Life tous, though not to touch. yet to see; or if not to see, to think we saw it. It brought fresh Blood into our Veins, fresh coour into our pale Cheeks, we look'd not like Men awaked from fleep, not like Captives broke from the Chains of Algiers, but like Persons raised from the Dead. But Hope and Fear made a strange Medly Passion in our Souls; like the Reparties of two contrary jostling Tides, or the ftruggling of the Eddy with the main Stream; Hope would perswade us that we saw the Land; but chill Fear bad us pause upon it, for as we eafily believe, what we defire to be true, fo we are as ready to fear left it should not prove true; for fear had got long possession of our Souls, and would hardly admit Hope to stir, but was ready to suppress it as a disturber of its Empire: We had seen nothing but Air, and Sea; Sea, and Air in five Dayes and Nights; that though our Reason tould us there was such a thing as Land, yet the Impressions that fear had made upon us, made it Questionable, whether ever we should see it. And we durst not give. too much Credence to our Eyes, that had been used to bring sadder stories to our Hearts.

Yet still we wrought hard: Hope did us that kindness it put us upon an earnest desire to see, whether we were deceived or no. After some further Labour, we grew more consident, and at last, fully satisfied that it was Land: I hope I shall never soeget what a sense we had of Gods goodness upon that Assurance. Extreams do equally annoy, and sometimes infatuate the mind: They tell us, that in Greenland, the extremity of Cold will make the Iron stick to the

G

r

d

n

Fingers,

Fingers, as our Experience assures extremity of Heat will do; for now like Diftracted Perlons, weall leapt into the Sea, quitting our Boat, and being all good Swimmers, we there Bathed, and cooled our heated Bodies. An Adventure, which, if well confidered, had as much of the Desperado in it as our putting to Sea: For now we were at the Mercy of the Sharks; which might have sheared off a Leg, or Arm; and now our over-heated Bodies were open to receive the Impressions of that Cold Element: But as we never confidered our Danger, the great and good God delivered us from the Ordinary eftects of fuch Folly; we presently returned to our Boat, and being both wearied with Labour, and cooled a little with the Sea, we lay us all down to Sleep in as much security, as if we had been in our own Beds: Nature being almost fpent, must have a Truce; she will not undertake to keep our Bodies upon their Legs, if we will not submit to her great standing Ordinance of Rest; and here we saw still more of Divine Goodness, that our Leaky Vessel did not bury us in the Sea, and we awaking find our felves in the other World: But he that gave us Sleep, measured it; and he measured it exattly not suffering us to out-steep the Season of plying our Pump, or that which supplyed the place of it,

Being thus refresh'd with sleep, we found new frength for our Work, and God sound us new

Work

were

Work for our strength: We tugged the harder at the Oar, because we hoped e'er Night to sleep upon a more stable, and faithful Element. But we made our way very flowly, and when we cast up the Account of our Progress, found that we had gone but little way in a long time; towards Evening we discovered another Island: The first we saw was Mayork, the second, Fromentere; and some of our Company that had Sailed in these Seas, would undertake to asfure us of it: We debated not long to which of these we should direct our Course, for the latter being much infested with venerious Serpents, and little, if at all Inhabited, we refolved all for Mayork: All that Night we Rowed very hard, and the next, being the fixth of July, and from our putting to Sea; we kept within fight of it all Day, and about Ten a Clock at Night we came under the Island, but the Rocks were there so craggy, and steep, that we could not climb up.

Whilst we were under these Rocks there came a Vessel, very near us. Let the Reader put himself in our stead, let him but Copy out our Thoughts, let him imagine how loth we were to lose all our toil and Travel, to forego our Deliverance, to have this Rich Mercy, which God had put into our Hands, wrested out of them again by some Turkish Pickaroon, or Gorsair, that are alwayes skimming those Seas: It concerned us therefore to lye close, and when the were passed by, we gently crept along the Coast as ne ar the shoar as we durst, till we found a convenient place, where we might thrust in our Weather-beaten Boat.

If these Papers should fall into the hands of some that are great Clerks in the Art of Navigation, and have conn'd the Mariners Terms of Art, they will smile at my improper wording of these Maters, and say, I am one of Paul's Mariners. But I can be content to be Accounted one of his Mariners, whilst I have shared in his Mercies: How many of those that spake the Language of the Sea, yet have found her Billows deaf to their Cries and Prayers, and their stately Ships made the Scorn of Winds, and the Reproach of Waves, when we, who had none of their Ships, and little of their skill, have had Experience of those Providences, to which rhey have been Strangers.

SECT.

SECT. XII.

The great kindness we received at Mayork from the Vice-Roy, and the Inhabitants of that Island and City.

7 Hen we were come to Land, we were not unsensible of our Deliverance. though like Men newly awakened out of a Dream, we had not the true Dimensions of it; We confessed God had done great things for us. but how great things he had done was beyond our Comprehension: We had escaped the Sea. but yet Death might be found at Land; and we were ready to fay, with Sampson, Judg. 15. 18. Lord, thou hast given this great Deliverance into the hands of thy Servants, and now shall we dye for Thirst? We had had no Food since we eat the Liver, and drank the Blood of the Tortoile, and therefore leaving three of our Company with the Boar, the other too, viz. John Anthony, and my felf were sent out to scout abroad for fresh Water: And the rather were we fent, because this John Anthony could speak both the Spanish, and Italian Tongues very perfectly; and I had as much of the Spanish as might serve to express our wants, and defires, if perhaps we might meet with any persons there about abouts. We were not far gone, before we fell into a Wood, and we were in a Wilderness in our thoughts, which way to take : He will needs go his way, and I mine. Good Lord! what a frail impotent thing is Man! That they whom common dangers by Sea, common Deliverances from Sea had United, should now about our own wills fall out at Land. And yet thus we did: He gave me reproachful words, and it's well we came not to blows: But I went my own way, and he feeing me resolute, followed me and the Providence of God, not dealing with us according to our frowardness, followed us both: This way led usto'a Watch-Tower of the Spaniands many of which they keep upon the Sea-Coaffs, to give the Countrey timely notice of any Pickaroons that come alhoar to Rob, and Spoyl.

When we came within call, fearing he might Discharge at as, we spoke to him upon the Watch; rold him our Condition, what we were, whence we came, how we escaped; and earnestly begged of him to direct us to some fresh Water, and in the mean time to bestow upon us some Bread! He very kindly threw us down an old mouldy Cake, but so long as it was a Cake, and not a stone, nor a Bullet, Hunger did not consider it's Mondiness: Then he directed us to fresh Water, which was hard by? We stood not telling Stories; we remembred our selves;

we remembred our Brethren lest with our Boat, and observing the Sentinels Directions, came to a Well, where there was a Pot with strings to draw with: We drank a little Water, and eat a bit of our Cake, but the passage was so dis-used, that we had much ado to force our Throats to relieve our clamourous stomachs: But here we staid not, but, with the sour Lepers in the Tents of the Syrians, 2 Kings 7. 9. Rebuked our selves, We do not well, we have glad Tidings to carry, and do we hold our peace? We return to our Boat, are welcomed by our Companions, acquaint them with the good success of our Embassy, and all prepare to make to the Well.

And now we must leave our Boat; that faith-ful Instrument of God's Providence, which had so trustily served his purpose to deliver us: It was not without some recoylings upon our Spirits, that we should so much as in appearance imitate the ingratitude of those, who having served their private ends on their Friends, and have now no further use of them, most ungratefully shake them off: That we should be like the water-dog, which uses the water to pursue his Game; and when he comes to Land, shakes it off as trouble-some, and burdensome. But it was no time to stand upon Complements; Hunger, Thirst, Weariness, desire of Refreshment and Rest. those importunate Duns, Commanded us away;

and tying our Boat as fast as we could to the Shoar, we left her to Mercy, which had been so good to us.

As we were going, or rather creeping, or crawling towards the Well, another Quarrel started amongst us, the Memory whereof is so ungrateful, that I shall give it a Burial in silence, the best Tomb for Controversies.

And now we are at the Well, and the Well is provided of Water, and we have something to draw; all these helps God has given us, but he must give us one more, even a throat to swallow it, without which, all the rest signific nothing. This was the evil Disease Solomon had observed in his Daies, Eccles. 6. 2. A Man to whom God had given Riches, Wealth, and Honour, so that he wanteth nothing for his Soul, of all that he desireth; yet God giveth him not Power to eat thereof: He that gives us water to drink, and meat to eat, must give us Power to eat and drink also. How totally do we depend upon him for Life, and Breath, and all things! One of our Company, William Adams, attempting to drink, after many Eslays was not able to swallow it, but still the water returned, so that he funk down to the Ground, faintly faying, I am a dead Man? we forgot our selves, to remember bim, and after much striving, and forcing, he took a little; and when he and we were refresh'd with with our Cake and water, we lay down by the Well-side till the Morning. None of us could watch for the rest, but One God watched over us all: There we lay lockt up, and buried in Sleep: The Heavens covered us, when we wanted a Canopy: Each might say in the Morning, with David, Psal. 3.5. I laid me down and slept;

I awaked, for the Lord sustained me.

When it was clear day, we addrest our selves once more to the man upon the watch-Tower, entreating him to direct us the ready way to the next House, or Town, where we might find relief. He civily points us towards a House about two Miles off, whither, with wearied steps, and joyful Hearts, we now began to Travel: Our Feet had been so parboyled, and quodled with the Suns heat, in the Salt-water pickle, that they were very raw, and more blifter'd; and long it was before we could overcome the tediousness of those two Miles. When we approach'd the House, the Owner espying us, and concluding by our shabby garb, that we were some Pilfering Roscals, presented a Fowling Piece at us, and chatged us to stand. The foremost of our Company, who could speak that Language well, meekly told him, he might spare that Language, we were not able if we had so wicked a will; nor willing if we had been able, to offer him the least injury; That we were a Company of poor Creatures, whom the wonderful Providence of God had refcued from the he Slavery of Algiers, and hoped he would. Thew Mercy to the Afflicted. The honest Farmer, moved with our Relation, sent us out Bread, Water, and Olives, with which when we had refresh'd our selves, we lay down, and rested three or four hours in the Field; and returning thanks for his Charity, prepared to crawl away at our lame rate. He feeing us thankful Beggers, enlarged his Civility to us, called us into his House, and gave us good warm Bean Pottage, which feemed to me the most Pleasant Food that ever I eat in my Life: Our Leave once more taken, we advanced towards the City of Mayork, which from this place is about ten Miles: No water could we meet with upon our . way, but towards Evening, we discoverd one drawing water at a Well, we hasted to him, and he drew for us; that was our Supper, and there was our Lodging that Night.

The next Morning we came into the Suburbs of the City, the strangeness of our Attire, being bare-stoot, bare-legg d, having nothing on but loose Coats over our Shirts; drew a croud of enquirers about us, who we were? whence we came? whither we went? We gave them a particular account of our Deliverance, with its Circumstances; and they as willing to pity, as to know our Estate, and as ready to Relieve, as pity, accommodated us for the present with food; they gave us Wine, and Strong-waters, and whatever the might recover our exhausted Spirits; but told us, we must be obliged to tarry in the Suburbs, till the Vice-Roy had notice that such strangers were Arrived. He had soon Information of us, and we as soon a Command to appear before him: He Examined us about many Affairs; what Men of War the Algerines had at Sea? what strength they were of at Land? But above all, he was most curious, and exact in satisfying himself about our Escape, our Boat, our hazzards at Sea, wherein when we had fully obeyed him, he ordered we should be maintained at his own Cost till we could have passage to our own Country.

Fits:

Of great intercy.

In this while the People gathered us Money to buy us Clothes and Shooes, and we wanted nothing that Nature called for, but thankful Hearts to God. And they endeavoured to help to that Mercy too: As I was walking in the Streets viewing the City, a young Mansteps to me, Friend (faid he) are you one of those that came lately over in the Canvas Boat? I Anfwered Yes, I was one of them: well (replyed the young Man) It was not the little Boat , but the great God that brought you Over. I must needs fay, I often think on this young man's words, and as often as I think on them they chide me, that I have not hitherto more publickly owned God in his Gracious and wonderful Deliverance. However others may be concern'd to read, I know not, yet I am concern'd to Write of the great things God has done for me-

SECT. XIII.

The Providences of God which attended us, and Conducted us all safe to England.

IT may not prove ungrateful to the Reader, to fee how the great God, who begun to work for us, perfected his work concerning us: How he that had, and did deliver, would still deliver us; as single Stars have their Glories, yet Constellations are more Glorious: So each Providence of God is admirable, but taken together, as one serving another, and this helping forwards that, so indeed they are most admirable; when the Creator viewed his each daies work, it so punctually answered its Idea according to which, and Obeyed the Power by which it was Created that he pronounced it Good; but when he reviewed the Product of the fix daies, he pronounced all to be very good: Each Letter in a Book speaks skill, but when those Letters form words, those words, fentences, there is a greater Excellency, and more skill Discovered : Separate Providences speak out eminently some of God's Attributes; but when we put them together, all the Attributes of God shine forth in them,

them, and one Illustrate another, which reflects

a light upon the former.

Mayork is a City where our English Ships did seldom Trade, and we being full of delire to fee our Native Countrey, preferr'd our humble Petition to the Vice-Roy, I hat we might have Puffige in the King of Spains Gallies, which were then in the Road bound for Alicant in Spain, which he graciously granted us: What cold Entertainment we met with there from fome of our own Countrey , I finall draw a veil over; yet even there we found the Mercies of God. One Merchant took Compaffion on us, and Conducted us to an English-mans House, where we Lodged, and gave us half a Dollar to defray our Charges. The next day understanding that there was an English-man in the Road. bound for England, we went about to fee for Passinge; we made our Condition our belt Ac-gument to prevail: The Master fold as, he had but little Provision; but if we would be content with Bread., and Beverage, we might go. We accounted that, Royal Fare, and accordingly waited till he fet Sail : Whill we were aboutd, two English Merchants came thither also, and werevery earnest that we would give them the thort of our Adventure! We gratified thear and one of them faid & Countrey-men, we have heard your flory. After a few days to we fer Sall, and when we were at Sea, were horly Chaled by two Tark to Mon of Whe, but being hear Gotto tore we got in there, and elaped. We had known Slavery too much and long , to be ambitions of it again; and therefore three of us, John Anchony, Jabar - Carpenter , and my folf went alhoar, and there flayed: Our other Companions ventur'd along with the Ship, and came into England before us. Whilst we were at Giblevore, the Spaniards understanding our Condition, much pityed us and one rold us, that if we would accept it, we might have Lodging in his Veffel, and he had Fish enough that we might make nie of : There we staid till our Money was gone, and then refolved to go with the Foot Post by Land to Cadiz, which is about fixty Miles: But whilft my two Companions where gone to enquire for the Courier, I Raid upon the shoar, and faw a small Spanish Vessel coming from Malaya, bound for Cadiz; I went aboard him, to defire Pallage, he freely granted it, and the next Morning early we fet Sail, and in little time came into Cadiz-Road, but not nigh enough to go afhore, the Captain, rold is, our Pallage was paid, we might freely go aftore when we would. Now, because we found no Ship here bound for England, and hearing, that there was one at St. Lucars, we Tran velled thither by Land, which is about twelve Miles : After a thort flay there dimet with the Malters Mate, of whom I earnedly enterated for Palligo; he told me, he had yery little Pro vilian and that it would be hard to be Obtained whilst we were talking, the Boat came to fetch him aboard; and in her there was a Youth, who was the Masters Son: He asked his Fathers Mate, who was also his Uncle, who we were? He told him, we were poor Men Escaped from Algiers, but for want of Provision, he doubted we could not go for England. No! (faid the Youth) do you think my Father will deny paffage to poor English-men, that come from Algiers? Come Countrey-men (faid he) come into the Boat, you shall have Passage: He prefently acquaints his Father with us and our Condition: He treated us with great kindness, he prevailed with the Merchants to lay in Provision for us: we continued in his Ship till we came away: In the time of our stay, I went aboard one Captain Good fon, who lay then in the Roads he was extremely civil to me; at my departure he gave me twenty shillings, and fet me aboard our Ship, in his own Boat. We met with contrary winds, and were very near Engaging with a Hamburger; it was five weeks before we could reach the Downs: where we arrived in Sep. 1644. The Commander of the Ship yvas Captain Smith, of Redriff.

A Further Narrative of James Deane and others.

The Methods of Gods Providence are Various, yet all equally fraight with, and guided with adorable Wisdom, Jultice; and goodness towards the Children of Men; sometimes by His Blessing Hee is pleased to Crown week and unlikely means, with strange and Amazing success: At other times to Blast Hopefull projects, and divert or overthrow promising designs when they seem full ripe for Execution. By the one Hee encourages our Faith in Himself; by the other, corrects our presumption on our own Investions, and by Both, Gloristes his own Omnipotency, Teaching us, That in and by Him we can do all things, but without Him, Nothing.

The foregoing Narrative of a Stupendious Deliverance, is a figual Instance of the First. And that which is here subjoin'd (referring in diverse Respects to the like Subject, tho failing in an equal Success) may serve as an Example of the second. And tho' our Relation abound not in such Varieties of Wonder, yet may the same be of some Satisfaction and Use to the Reader, as well for acquainting him with the Miseries poor Christians endure under the Tyranny of cruel Mahumetans, thereby to awaken his Compassion, as also to raise his pious thoughts to an Adoration of the Divine power and Wisdom, so Visibly, the Differently manifested, in these two Cases, wherein as farr as mans Eye could reach, the Contrivance the Conduct, and probability, seemed Equal, or rather to have excelled in the latter, the frustrated of Effect.

On the 25. of June 1679. we Sailed from Briftol in a Vessel called the Robert and Hester, Captain William Stoakes Commander , bound for Barbado's. Those that go down to the Sea in Ships behold the Wonders of the Lord in the deep, fays the Royal Pfalmift; And I could with that all fuch would lay those Wonders more to heart, lo as better to Improve their Lives : To Confider', that they are every minute within a few Inches of cercain Death, nothing but a poor plant (the daily Embles of their Coffin) between them and a watry Grave; That every hour they are subject to Storms and Tempests, ready to become a prey between the fury of contending Winds and Waves; besides the hazard of Enemies and Pyrates, and a Thousand other Cafualties, all which were enough one would think to keep them in the most sober frame, an Holy Conversation and strict Dependence on that all-sufficient Power, who alone can protect them from fo many immediate and Round-threatning Dangers; But so incorrigibly hard and wicked is the Heart of Man, that we find too many ender the prospect of all these Wonders and Perils utterly infentible; Mariners that fill their Sails with the Breath of Curfing and Blashbemies, and encrease the raging of the Sea with the Vomits of their Surfeiting and Drunkenness; And what can such expect but swift Destruction, even to be Swallowed up by an Ocean of Water, and delivered over to aDeluge of everlatting Flames? I fpeak this not as reflecting on our Ships Crew in particular (wherein most were at least Civiliz'd Persons) but for a General Caution; Nor yet dare I excuse my self and our Company from many neglects of our Duty, for which it appears in the Sequel, God had a Controverfie with us, whose Justice always punishes us, that we should not Sin, and never but for Simping.

60

After a week pleasant Sailing, on the 2d. of July at Day light, we saw two ships standing towards us, and soon discovered them to be Terkish Men of Warr, which put us into a great and General Consternation, as knowing how unprepared we were for resistance, both for our ship treason of a quantity of Hay we had on Deck and elsewhere, for a dozen Horses we carried with us; However we resolved to Sell our Liberty at the best rate we could, and prepared to Entertain them; within an hour and an half, one of them was came up along by our side, and for the First Complement fired in his

Broad-

Broad-fide and a luftly Volley of Small Shore, which flot off our Tiller, and-wounded us three Men; but none mortally; Kild also one of our Horses in the Hold, and having received two Shots more between Wind and Water, we quickly had about 4 or 5 foot Water in the Hold: we Answered them with our Guns, but to little purpose; for having foon spent all the Powder we had up out of our Powder-Room, and it being Impossible for us at that instant to come at any more; and at the same time perceiving the other Ship almost with us, and that it was impossible we should make good our Defence a gainst 2 of the best Ships of Algeirs (For they proved to be the Golden Horse, old Canaria Captain, and the other the Golden Rofe, young Canaria Captain,) we thought best to Compound for our Lives at the price of our Liberties, and furrendred our Ship.

Hereupon their Boat came aboard and fetcht us all away, except two whom they left aboard with fome of their Turks and Moors. When we came on Board the Turks man of Warr, the Captain by an Interpreter inquired our Lading, and with many menaces exacted a full Account to the best of our knowledge, soon after they took 2 Ships more, and ere they went off our Coast, they surprized in all 9 Ships, wherein were about 170 Souls. And having taken the men out, and pillaged their pleasure; some of the Ships they Burnt, and others Sunk, having not Men enough to spare to Man so many, but three of the best they sent away home; And having now been out of the Straights near six Weeks, they are afraid to venture in without clearing their Ships, and therefore went on the South Coast of Barbary to Migadore, touching also at Saphe and other Towns to take in fresh

Provisions;

All this time we poor CaptiveChristians were put every night in Irons. The manner whereof was thus, between 2 spare Top Masts between the Decks placed about 6 afunder, we fat close to one another on each fide, and in the middle went a long Ir on Bolt between our Shackles, fo that we were constrained to sleep sitting (when the necessitie of Nature could Charm our perplexed Spirits into any kind of Repose;) not being afforded Room to lyz down; And the weather being extream hot, and the place close and Sultry, we were forced to fit naked; The Provisions alotted to keep as alive, (who now began rather to Court and wish for Death) was only a small pittance of Bread, and some Vinegar, with a few drops of Oyl, and this was all our Allowance for 24 Hours; and that which yet added more to our mifery was, that they afforded us not much above a pint of Water aDay, so that thro' very extremitt of Therft. we were frequently forc'd to beg and intreat of the Moors boys, to bring as falt Water, and could but feldome obtain that favor of them neither; Nay when we were in Magadore, tho we could (like Tantalus for our greater Torture) fee the Fresh-Water plentifully on the flore, and were almost Dead with Drought, in working and continual heaving in of Ballaft. yet we could not be allow'd but about 3 pints for four and twenty Hours, and half of that 100, Salt or brackish; whereby we became fo faint that we could hardly stand on our Legs; but it was vain to Intreat or expect any other usage from those whose tenderest Mercus were the Extremities of Cruelly, unless we would have abandon'd all fear of God, and respect to modesty and the Dignity of Humane Nature, by Condescending to the detestable follicitations of their most unuatural Lusts, to which they were not wanting in their curfed Importunities; fo that our very Souls were not free from their Tortures . They being fo filthy as to mix with Brute Beaft, having feen such Evidences of their abominations in that kind, with fome Creatures that were on Board, as fill'd our Hearts with horror, and are not fit to be named amongst Christians: At length the Wind standing fair, they resolv'd to Sail Homewards; but first must perform their Orisons; (for these Filthy-Infidels at to the outward Ceremonies and observances of their wicked Religion are Extraordinary Puntinul;) Therefore for a Peace-Offering to the Sea, (or whether it were to Mabomet, to fend them an Happy passage, I know not)

not, they effered their Sacrifice of a Sheep, having first cut in the midst, one half they heaved Over-Board on the one side, the other on the other; with certain Muttering Prayers which we understood not; This sit of Devotion being past, they make all the Sail they could, and in they stand through the Streights-Month, and in two or three days Arrived at their Defined Port;

Nor was it undefired by us: For as we long'd to know the worst of our Condition, so we statered our selves that it must needs be better than that on Board, at least that there we should have Water enough, the Want of which here was in-tollerable.

Being brought ashore we were sent to the Armidare's House, and the next day carried to the Pallace of the Dey, Bashaw, or King, who by his Prerogative out of every Eight Slaves brought in, Chuses one, and commonly elects the Captains, as supposing they are able to procure the best Ransome, or if there happen to be taken any young Lady of Extraordinary Beauty or Youth, well Featur'd, and of a promising Aspect, these he snaps, and sends away as most Acceptable Presents to the Grand Seignier; for whom there is never any Redemption. The next day about eight of us were carried into the Market, and one or two of the Kings Slaves with us, where about one a Clock we were led about the Market, one by one by a Negro, who in the Turkish Language cryed out as he went, to this effect. — Here wa brave Captain, a Mate, a Merchant, &c. (as the Person is quallissed) one has bid so much, who bids more? And when they have been the Market round, and none will give more, then they put him by; And so proceed till all are sold. And then they have us to the Kings Honse again, and if He or any else there, will give more but to the value of a shilling then was bid in the Market, he shall have the Slave; otherwise the Market Chapman takes him, and he is thenceforth absolutely His,

e

It was my hard fortune to be fold to a Tanareen (or Moor, whose Ancestors formerly came out of Spain, and ever since assume the Title of that City from whence they were driven) but his Name was Haly Hammer Ben Jejiste, and for his Temper it was well known, for as I came out with him from the Kings House, several told me I had got a Curfed Patroon.

61

But I was now in, for better for worse, and sollowed him very obsequiously to his House, where after a day or two, I with others of his Slaves (whereof several were English) were set to gather dung out of a Fondack, as they call it, being the place where Horses, Asses, Mules, and Cows and other Cattel, sometimes to the number of 100 or more were kept, and also the place of Slaughter, where they killed Beasts as oft as they had occasion, whose Blood mixt with their

Dung

Dung in that hot Climate, made it very noisome and offensive; but we must not be Dainty-No-fed, but rake it up into Baskets, and earry it out on our Heads or Shoulders, to a Dunghil at a

f

n

Thus

great distance.

This Jobb being finisht, we were put to work in the Mould, abord Prizes, for fometime, and after that fent to the Garden or Vineyard (for it was both) about four miles from the Town, where inflead of digging with a Spade, we had only a Chopp of 8. or 101. weight which we were forced to work with at Arms-end, and I think was as hard Labour as any could be a unless grinding at their Silk-Mells; and if vve Louered, or they were pleased to think we did fo, prefently we had many blows on the back, and sides; and sometimes on the Soles of the feet, and our hair torn off our heads, with other inexpressible Cruelties, whilst in the mean time. we had many times but one poor Cake of Cour fe-Bread allowed us per day for our diet, and our Lodging at night most hard and miserable, for frequently when we were in the City, we were driven into a Nafty Cellar, where was an House of Office that frank intollerably; and the room fo finall, that there being near twenty of us, it would not afford breadth or length enough for us to Ly Down, but there were some Bords put up and aPlatoon made about thre foot from the Ground, where some lay a top, and the rest under neath.

ne

0 ut

a k

nd

or 11,

d

I

d c,

1e

er

e, ır

or

e

n

h

n Le

19

Thus for many long moneths we continued as miserable, as to this World, as 'twas possible for the Envy and Cruelty of our Patroon to make us. You need not doubt but we had often thoughts of making our Escape, but the manner how to do it, feemed next to impossible; yet as Necessay is the Mother of Invention, variety of ways were proposed, some that were men of Courage heated by these Cruelties to a degree of Desperation, were for taking a Boat from the Mould at Noon-day, & going away maugre all their Force, and defying them to Catch us, but this was lookt upon as extravagant, others had other projects; and no sooner was any thing offered, but it was difliked, for indeed all were attended with infuperable Difficulties, and yet so greedy were we of Liberty, that we would Catch at any thing that feemed to promife us that happiness, and somewhat eased our present miseries by those pleasing thoughts and Idaas; which yet our recollected Reason told us were vain and impra-Clicable.

At length one of my Fellow-Slaves told me of a delign that He and some others had of getting away, which he verily believed might be fenzible, and after he had sworn me to Secresy, acquainted me, That it was by building a Boat privately, but that they wanted strength, and in Artisteer for the Work; which I undertook to procure; The Names of us Concerned in his Project were William Johnson, Captain Pe-

Captain Thomas Cheiney, William Knight of Bristol, Henry Bull, William Phelps, Arnold Showel of Bristol, Captain, Another a Carpenter, whose name I know not, though I brought him into the design; Three Spaniards, a Portuguez Negro, who were with us in the Garden, and my felf.

Matters being thus refolved on, we applyed our felves to getting of Thyme, some of which we furnisht our selves with, out of our own and the rest from other Polks Gardens, in the Night (wherein if we had been Caught, we should have had Three or 400 Bastinadoes for Breakfast) and it was almost a miracle, how those which lay in the Garden, viz . John Atwood and the Spaniards, escaped it, the Moors lying very thick up and down the Hedges; but at last after much time, hazard and industry, we had formed our Keel, which was twenty foot long, fix foot broad and three foot deep, and our Timbers fitted to their places, with holes ready bored, that there should not want much knocking, when we should fet her up for good and all; we had likewise got Canes to make fast with Rope-yarns from Timber to Timber, as alfo, Puch, Tar, Tallow, and other requisites, For providing of which; you must know, that fome of us had faved privately, fome small palcels of money, and others being inffered to work at their own hand, and follow Trades, paying their Patroons so much a Month, got Money, which they expended freely on this occasion; But the great difficulty was to get the deffed Hides wherewith we intended to cover our Boat, and to help us therein we were beholding to Mr. Showel, who fince his Slavery, upon I know not what former inlight into that Mystery, had set up for a Cobler, and lived from his Patroon under Contribution; and by that means had the Opportunity to buy them, which were privately convey'd into those things in which we carried Dung on the Mules, and fo got out of the Toven, and so sovved up, which was most artificially performed by Mr. Showel and Mr. Bull, and the Boats covering most conveniently prepared, and all things hid in parcells near the Sea-fide ready for the Voyage.

fome

Hitherto things going on thus fairly, and every one of our Cabal expecting po less than Liberty, the very day appointed for our going away at Evening being come, and having provided Bread and Water and other Necessaries for that purpose. It happen'd our Patroon himfelf, who had not been in the Garden for sometime, did, by I know not what ill-Fortune, or rather as to me good Providence, come into the Garden, of whose approach a Spaniard set for a Spye, gave them notice, so that they had time enough to bide their things which they were preparing that night to set together, but of ld n-

no

nt ned ch

he ld

ld k

ofe nd

ry n-

ad g,

ur each

ast

iat

to

ing

fome of them being found rambling, were strictly Examined, and when come home severely Beaten upon Suspicion, but they stood it on stiffly, and never Impeached any.

In the mean time I was gone to call fome more of our Company, and at my return received tidings from the Spaniard how Cafes stood; whereupon we confulted, whether it were beff to go on prefently, or deferr it for some time, and it was carried for waiting another Opportunity; which whilst we were expecting, another Accident put us to stand, which was thus, Some of our Timbers being bound together, and put into the next Garden by Confent of a Spaniard, who of Necessity must be made privy to the Delign, his Patroon happen'd to light upon them fo cut to pieces, and violently best his Slave, but by good luck this old Fellovv and our Patroon viere not Friends, and fo the bufiness never came to his Ear.

Therefore this Disappointment of the loss of our Timber did not veholly discourage, but got others and framed them, and had brought all things again to perfection, vehen once more our project veas Interrupted, and by other hands and in an untimely manner put in Execution.

For about the latter end of November 1681 there came from other Gardens 2 Durchmen, a Spaniard and some others; Who, by I cannot guess, what means, being acquainted with our Degenstiand the forward Beist werwere in they anglist antiventual and property problems that Tay in our Concept, and a gree fortheight to make his or uses proceeding for The Andread who and the trust of the care would have contend and of with backer bene woold week week the many see the see his week that came too late,) and vivisonic sgrish Friends what Rosi help of the aneans which they to long and with their pargue is all united ge ad been constiving to leave them behind and straight as well with the wife with the original those pare girlingers of guildrand and and and Hope's of Date apprevall and the kine colombia; ret under Protende of Tower Ermitary the bolisto and their conde whoreway shirt and annual public blicker behick as stort sithing to suggest the shift effect theody appareting a vivide small chapter effolyegioted be golden of grade be longery and armine in sociement a legisland of the property of the p ninimpolished the property is inductional articles otherwisiani Dans toutions thing of least offer everal source a state of the long of the l poles they fastilly subremising terms balde to lof them Mannetiand bear of declarentations a Jan of Water, some Figs, some Bread, and a Brook aband them; and so the before mentioned Englishman lamenting the loss of this Opportunity , creducifed to his Garden undifovered.

Har Kar shired willed cane of a

A Peritor Nary Sine of Jam Deane of a

Next morning twas my lot with one of m Fellow Slaves to be fent into the Garden , but finding no body there, and quickly perceiving other Symptomes, I concluded they were gone: But Oh ! hove much some did Ifvyell with against them for leaving me behind, (for as yer understood not the Truth, the strargyards I did from the before mentioned English man that came too late,) and vybet, an Excels of Grief and forrow did politis me for not going with them; when yet this pery thing which I fo much fretted my felf about , was to me the the most enterest Mercy of Providence; for those that west off , were mean any of them hear day forthet 'cis Justy supposed they were at Jan and call away a And as for me that year left behind a writhin fix where a sign in 189 Kan our states a sign of the pieces of higher heing saco pieces of higher beides as 8 for Charges a and to I fately returned so my Marivo Country & For Pyhich Gratious Providence of God, as Lhope Laftall bever forget to retune him continual thanks from the Centre of my Soul sofo I thought it no less than my Ducy region this Publique Telli mony of my Grantade the that Divine and A dorable Power to whom he all praise and Honour both normal for Ever more lant of Water, fonce Floring are Break stand a there's and he hefore menrioned Englishmen Lamenting wire loss of this Plone coling of de Sty 145 vanation

